Yes, it's the same thing across the board. The streets are so dirty. They need to make it illegal to spit on the street, too. There are lots of gross habits.

The other experience is that, in some of the casinos, you may be hard-pressed to find an American. Some casinos have been completely overtaken by foreign enclaves. In other places, there was definitely a "decline-like" experience. I realized after my experience in Las Vegas that the demographic data is not actually accurate. Why would they fill out those little census sheets? They are based on who answers the surveys.

It was here that I was asked by a Hispanic immigrant if I was "European." I thought we were having a nice interaction. They know who is American and who is not, but there are a lot of rude behaviors. Some people I wouldn't even dare look at; they mean-mug.

Within the city, it is still maintained and very beautiful, yet it doesn't take long to hear the sirens.
