

This Isn't Women's Fault

This isn't women's fault. Unfortunately, women and men both face challenges when it comes to matters of politics.

The problem women face in their fight, or what some refer to as feminism, is that some men want to see women as property. Women are human beings with autonomy, independence, and the ability to make decisions concerning their own souls and bodies. The problem is entitlement, as this man demonstrates. The blame should be placed where it belongs in this case.

Another way to describe feminism is the fight against war and slavery. The right and the left will never get along if the issue becomes centered on words and the actual events taking place are ignored. Women are criticized for using the word feminism. Meanwhile, a woman can be raped tens of thousands of times while the majority of her traffickers are never convicted.

Human trafficking survivor's account: <https://edition.cnn.com/2015/11/10/americas/freedom-project-mexico-trafficking-survivor/index.html>

The Rape of Berlin: <https://www.bbc.com/news/magazine-32529679>

The same concerns are present in the abortion debate. It is clear that Americans are in conflict with Russia, and Soviet forces historically committed mass sexual violence against women during World War II. Rape has always been used as a weapon of war, and this truth remains relevant today.

Whether the war occurs at home or during an active mass conflict, women must have autonomy over their bodies to safeguard themselves from violent perpetrators. So long as women experience suppression of their voices and bodily autonomy, the left and the right will never get along.

For these reasons, I feel it would be far more politically sound for these particular topics, including feminism and abortion, to be set aside while we come together on other issues. The extremism, strong opinions, and reasons people move in opposite political directions often begin here.

These are serious topics, and women do not want to be attacked for speaking about them. Feminism is a light word for the extensive crimes committed against women.

The mediation is to stop the attacks on women's sovereignty altogether.

“Response: Kyle Reyes
• Following

Owner, Law Enforcement Today, Blue Lives Matter and The Police Tribune. CEO, The Silent Partner Marketing. Serial entrepreneur. Christian conservative. Keynote speaker.

Visit my website

55m •

Where are all of the feminists NOW?!?!?! A California Islamic scholar just declared that women captured in war become slaves who can be s*xually used because the Quran makes it “halal.”

Uthman ibn Farooq, based in San Diego, has taught that intimacy with female prisoners of war is not adultery or sin because Allah made it lawful.

The UK banned him from entering the country in 2025 over exactly these views. In the video he calmly explains the classical rule: captives become property and s*xual access is permitted.

This is not an isolated fringe rant. Similar radical statements keep surfacing.

Preachers and online voices continue to cite the same doctrine to justify taking non-Muslim women as s*x slaves during conflict.

Recent calls have even targeted specific communities. The pattern is clear and documented across classical texts and modern extremists.

America cannot pretend this teaching is harmless or theoretical. When scholars in California openly promote s*xual slavery of captives as religiously approved, it demands attention and rejection. This ideology has no place here.

Wake the heck up before it's too late, America.

#Islam #California”

