SUICIDE PREVENTION

9888

GOES LIVE JULY 16, 2022

Governor Kathy Hochul announced the successful implementation of 988 in New York State as the new three-digit number to call or text to be connected to the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline. All 62 counties in New York State will be covered for the launch of the new 988 Lifeline, which will ensure that anyone with a New York area code contacting 988 will be connected to one of New York's 988 crisis centers.

"Connecting people who are experiencing a mental health crisis or considering suicide to trained counselors can significantly help them through difficulties that seem insurmountable, and the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline provides hope and support to those who need it most," Governor Hochul said. "By implementing 988, we are providing these individuals, as well as their families and friends, an easy-to-remember number that will give them access to the services they need."

"It is incumbent upon us as New Yorkers to provide those among us who are struggling with mental health issues with the help they need, when they need it," said Lieutenant Governor Antonio Delgado. "Crises don't only happen during business hours, so implementing this lifeline, which is available any time of the day or night, will help save lives."

The FY 2023 Enacted Budget included $35 million to significantly expand 988 crisis call center capacity throughout New York State. This funding will increase to $60 million on a full annual basis starting in FY 2024. OMH has also allocated one-time funding of $10 million in federal supplemental Community Mental Health Services Block Grant resources to the 988 crisis call centers, allowing them to expand statewide capacity and infrastructure. New York State also received a $7.2 million federal grant from the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) to aid in the rollout of the new 988 Lifeline.

Calling 988 provides a direct connection to compassionate, accessible care and support for anyone experiencing mental health or substance abuse related distress. A chat feature will also be available through the Lifeline's website (988lifeline.org).

The 988 Suicide and Crisis Lifeline will be able to:

- Connect people experiencing a mental health or substance use crisis to a trained counselor who can address their immediate needs and help connect them to ongoing care.
- Reduce health care spending with more cost-effective early intervention.
- Reduce use of law enforcement, public health, and other safety resources.
- Meet the growing need for crisis intervention.
- Help end stigma toward those seeking or accessing mental healthcare.

The new 988 Lifeline will also help achieve another one of Governor Hochul's goals - removing obstacles to healthcare and reducing disparities in access, quality, and treatment outcomes for historically marginalized, underserved and unserved populations. This includes people of color, members of the LGBTQ community, older adults, rural New Yorkers, veterans, immigrants, people with disabilities and people who have limited English proficiency.

There are currently 13 operating 988 crisis contact centers in New York State and two in the development stage.

COVID-19 TREATMENT HOTLINE

New York City Mayor Eric Adams and New York Governor Kathy Hochul announced the launch of a new free hotline in New York for those who test positive for COVID-19, but don't have a health care provider, as part of ongoing efforts to keep New Yorkers protected throughout the pandemic. The hotline, 888-TREAT-NY, was launched by the New York State Department of Health after reaching an agreement to utilize the Virtual ExpressCare platform operated by NYC Health + Hospitals.

New York City residents, regardless of income or health insurance coverage who test COVID-19 positive, are eligible to be evaluated for treatment by calling 212-COVID-19 or completing an evaluation on the New York State COVID-19 ExpressCare Therapeutics Access website, which includes a telemedicine visit. New Yorkers outside of New York City should call 888-TREAT-NY (888-873-2869).

The hotline is available 24-hours per day, seven days a week and is operated by experienced Health + Hospitals professionals who have the clinical training to prescribe treatment and referrals, if needed. The ExpressCare platform is a service that allows New Yorkers to receive virtual care from a NYC Health + Hospitals provider.

The telemedicine visit will include a clinical assessment by medical providers who will identify the appropriate COVID-19 treatment plan, which may include a prescription for Paxlovid or Molnupiravir. These oral antiviral medications have both been proven to decrease hospitalization for those that are at risk for severe disease. When given soon after a positive COVID-19 diagnosis these antivirals also help fight infection and shorten recovery time.

As all treatments require a prescription, those who test positive for COVID-19 should talk to their provider or call 888-TREAT-NY to determine what treatment is best for them. New York State is assigned a weekly allotment of both Paxlovid and Molnupiravir from the U.S. Department of Health & Human Services.

Under the agreement, insured patients will pay a co-pay amount based on their plan and the New York State Department of Health will cover the costs of the service for those without health care coverage.

Multiple COVID-19 treatments are available for people ages 12 and older, and can be delivered to New Yorkers' homes for free. For more information on COVID-19 treatments, please call 212-COVID19 and press 9 or visit DOHMH's COVID-19 treatments website.

THE IMPORTANCE OF GETTING HELP FOR YOUR FEARS AND ANXIETIES

by Stan Popovich

Getting professional help for dealing with your persistent fears and anxieties is the single most important step in your recovery. Many people are reluctant to get the assistance they need for various reasons.

Making excuses for not getting treatment for your fear related issues will not help the situation. With this in mind, here are seven reasons why getting help for your mental health problems is so important.

1. You will get tips on handling your mental health issues: Getting professional help can lead to additional insights and suggestions to your stress and anxiety problems. A professional counselor can give you many ideas on how you can successfully manage your fears and anxieties. This is important in getting your life back on track.

2. Get access to different resources: Most counselors and psychologists know of ways to get rid of your fears. They can recommend certain treatments that will improve your situation. The only way you can get access to these treatments is if you talk to a counselor. Ask your primary care physician if he or she knows anyone that can be of assistance.

3. You can't manage your anxieties all by yourself: Your fears, anxieties, and depression can be difficult to manage and more than likely you will need some direction. Many people think that they can overcome their mental health problems on their own. This is a mistake. A person should seek assistance to start the recovery process.

4. You will improve: As you work with a professional, you will improve on your skill sets in managing your fears. You will be able to overcome your anxieties over time which will benefit you later on in your life. Knowing how to boost your mental health will get your life back on track and will make you much happier.

5. You will get better a lot faster: Getting some guidance from a counselor will save you a lot of suffering in the long run. You will get the answers you are looking for which will help reduce your fears and anxieties. You will get better a lot faster by talking to a therapist and you will feel much better about yourself which is important when it comes to dealing with your mental health.

6. It is your life: Remember that you are the person who is suffering and not your friends and family. Don't let the opinions of your peers prevent you from getting the relief that you deserve. Maintaining your anxieties should be your number one priority. Always do what is best for you and do not get into the habit of trying to please everybody else.

7. You will not be alone: You will have people in your corner who will be able to help improve your mental health issues. You won't feel as alone when attempting to get rid of your fears. It is best to be with others who are supportive and who will understand your situation. This will help make things easier when it comes to your fears and anxieties.

SCHOOL IS OUT: LET'S KEEP KIDS SAFE

by Dr. Sharon M. Cadiz

From my days in child welfare, I know that regrettably when children are out of school, rates of abuse and neglect often rise. Going back even further in my professional career when I was an Education Director in Head Start, I learned that when parents or caregivers are stressed, children are at-risk. Children with special needs and very young children are particularly vulnerable populations. Schools and other forms of group care can serve as a protective factor, making children more visible and engaged within systems of care. Of course, this is not always the case; however, school and day care providers are among the mandated reporters of child abuse and neglect. The summer meals program is one way to see children and provide some basic nutrition in instances when family finances might be limited in meeting children's nutritional needs. The COVID pandemic made the government keenly aware that food for families with children needed to be supplemented. However, this form of support needs monitoring to ensure that the help actually reaches the children.

The issue of child safety came to my attention again, after so many years, a couple of weeks ago when a dear friend called to ask advice regarding an incident during which she was assaulted when she spoke to a mother who was punching a small girl presumed to be her daughter. The woman left the scene following the attack and although my friend made a police report, the identity of the assailant remains unknown. My friend sustained injuries to her face including a black eye and bruises to her face and jaw. Our approach to such scenes can easily escalate and lead to this kind of outcome, even if the effort is to safeguard a child. Although each of us should be focused on the shared goal of keeping children safe and well cared for, the reality is far more complicated. Verbal and physical abuse are things that one might observe anytime and anywhere. As with any emotionally charged situation, we must proceed with caution; however, it is very difficult to contain a response to a helpless child being victimized. Just as the observer of such actions gets triggered, the perpetrator gets triggered by interference or anything that suggests that he or she is being judged, and unfortunately the result can escalate into more violence.

We need only to hear the latest stories of road rage and gun violence to recognize that folks are coming unhinged for many different reasons; and anger is just the tip of a deep festering wound, trauma or memory of victimization that erupts when confronted. Compounding this complex problem is the fact that regulating emotions under social, economic or psychological conditions of stress, is extremely difficult for people who see no way out except to lash out. Children tend to be the target both in public spaces and private places behind closed doors.

My friend is a very sensible and caring individual who intervened in the hope of sparing the little girl further harm from the pain and suffering of abuse at the hands of her mother. Consequently, the mother turned her anger and violence toward my friend. Our options for how to handle such a situation appear sorely lacking. I am motivated to write about this because prevention is probably the best option, although it, too, is no simple matter. Keeping a safe distance and calling in a case to the State Central Registry have their own limitations and consequences that could also have serious implications. Prevention is a process that engages parents and caregivers to address the antecedents to violence or abuse toward children. Scarred and traumatized children often grow up to become the next generation of abusive parents, caregivers or adults, so it behooves us to take on this issue for all of our sakes. Prevention requires support, tools and comprehensive attention that meets people where they are, and that could be in our families and communities. The framework for raising issues of concern can begin with an assessment of the level of stress that one might be under and that is how the available programming for prevention engages those who are at-risk for harming their children. I have written about prevention resources before highlighting programs such as the New York Foundling Crisis Nursery and Respite Center, as well as social services directed at helping families in distress. Prevention does not presume to make excuses for the behavior that results in the harming of children or puts them at-risk; it endeavors to create motivation and a commitment to positive change and child protection. Clearly, this is a huge undertaking and it does not spare us the tragic and costly damage created in the meantime, but that is why the public must be educated about the problem; its root causes and available support services.

Because the safety of children is a public health issue, it is imperative that we talk about this subject among our neighbors, friends, fellow parents, local leaders and others in a variety of settings encouraging folks to seek help and support without the stigma and judgment that could result in shaming that intensifies rather than extinguishes the violence and abuse. The Floating Hospital and Child Center of Queens have local offices that provide parenting support services. The Single Parent Resource Center and various parenting groups and helplines can be easily accessed. COVID put many parents into roles that probably felt overwhelming, and there are lingering outcomes that show the importance of front loading our approach to child abuse and neglect. There is even a term coined to capture this phenomenon: "Parent Burn-out." Having a child welfare case due to a report of abuse and neglect is very serious, but even if that should happen, the Child Welfare Organizing Project which educates and advocates for parents; prevention agencies; the ACS Office of Advocacy and related service providers can help to break the cycle through targeted interventions and support. All of our children deserve to have summer memories that don't include emotional or physical scars. I co-presented at a conference of the National Association of Social Workers a few years ago and my final recommendations focused on inviting change by a) intervening with safety and trust; b) interrupting negative patterns; c) installing experiences of connection to purpose; meaning; value; positive intention, self-regard, awareness of strengths to assist parents who often may feel inadequate or suffer from low self-esteem; d) investigate the role of abuse, environment, substances, and interpersonal relationships on the parent or caregiver. If this sounds like a lot for us to accomplish, just think of what happens to our children, if we fall short. An old drug treatment adage that seems appropriate here is: "hurt people hurt people." We have been warned, now it's time to take action because school is out. Does that parent need respite; is that parent in a domestic violence situation; does he or she have a drug habit that impairs judgment, or are they alone and without support? We certainly cannot fix everything that is broken in people's lives, but raising our awareness might help us uncover meaningful ways to help children stay safe during the summer and beyond.

WAITING FOR WHAT?

by Jamal Jivanjee

Imagine that you've been feeling a bit off for the past few months. So, you decide to make an appointment with the doctor just to cover your bases and make sure everything is kosher. One appointment turns into two, and then a referral. You answer all the questions and take the tests they order for you. A couple of weeks later, the phone rings: "You need to come in right away."

As you sit down and face the physician who is sitting comfortably behind the desk, the words "I'm so sorry" and "...about six months" are all that echo in the chasm of your being.

"This has to be a mistake. I still have five years until I can retire. I've done my time. I've worked hard. We've been saving everything we can to be able to relax and travel to all the places we've always said we wanted to go. I just need ten more years at the least. Five to finish out my career, and the other five to enjoy the decades of hard work. I've been waiting for this season of life where I can finally live. What do you mean only six more months?"

By this point, you are probably realizing that you haven't been present enough in life to be the parent or spouse that you truly desired to be. As a parent, you've been saving the creating of memories for the upcoming vacations. As a spouse, you figured you would have time in retirement, when you'd be able to be together without any distractions. That's why you sacrificed so much of your life over the years. You just need a few more years to make it all worthwhile. If you would have known your life would be over in six months, you would never have agreed to postpone your life to the future. How can you get the years back?

For far too many of us, a brief awareness of our mortality or a brush with death, is the only time when we consider the rareness and tremendous value of everyday life. The more rare something is, the greater the perception of its value. Of all the living beings on this planet, human beings possess something that no other being has; conscious awareness of our own impending death. It is for this very reason that humans have the ability to be conscious of the rarity and value of this thing that we call life. It is only when we value something that we treat it with utmost care and precision. Most of us, however, only give mental assent to our mortality. As a result, we live life as if our death was not a present tense possibility.

If you had six months to live, how would your day today change? How much time and energy would you spend on drama and arguing with others? Would you slow down and enjoy your meals and engage in meaningful conversations with your loved ones? Would you worry about the future less? Would you take that trip you've always wanted to take, and would you put the phone down a bit more? How about your work? Would you quit your job feeling that it is a waste of your valuable and limited time, or would you work even more diligently and with more focus knowing there is something of value the world needs you to leave behind? I think you already know the answers to those questions.

If there is one thing that I am passionate about, it is living. I am passionate about helping people live for a living, not simply for survival. There is nothing better than a life well lived to its full potential. In order to do this, I am convinced that we cannot wait any longer to live. We cannot wait for retirement, for heaven, for the weekend, or for the vacation.

Living must begin today because we are not guaranteed that we have six months left to live. As a matter of fact, no one is guaranteed that they have the rest of the day. What is guaranteed, however, is that you have this moment. Learning to live in alignment and harmony with this moment is an inside job that the majority of people on this planet have not learned how to do. My wish and blessing for you is that you will learn the art of living for a living.

CITI BIKE ARRIVES! A NEW DAY FOR WOODSIDE CYCLISTS

by Cyclo Pete

They are here! Just over nine years after NYC officially opened its bike share system, and several years after bikes were frustratingly installed in adjacent neighborhoods, the famous blue Citi Bikes are finally being rolled out in our area. What good does it do us? Is Citi Bike safe? Let's dig in.

Bike share makes the neighborhood smaller and connects us to other areas

As of this writing, the easternmost Citi Bike station installed is at 48th Street and Barnett Avenue. Being a station at approximately the mid-point of our neighborhood rollout, I decided to test it out on a Classic (non-electric) bike. Going East, I arrived at the Woodside 61st Street station in 7 minutes. Going West, I was at Queens Plaza in 9 minutes. But I didn't stop there. I got all the way down to Queensbridge Park and Vernon Avenue in 13 minutes. Whether the 7 is down or skipping your stop and you need another train, or if you want to sip that coffee on a bench overlooking the East River, Citi Bike can serve you well!

Safety in numbers

The initial 2013 rollout of bike share was met with skepticism about its safety given the relative lack of bike infrastructure in the city. Thankfully, after nearly a decade of operation, Citi Bike has proven exceedingly safe. Part of this is because of the physical bikes themselves. They are large and generally slower than normal bikes, and the upright posture and default blinking lights make riders very visible to drivers. Most importantly, bike share puts more bikers on the road, and the safety in numbers principle benefits everyone. In May of 2022, each Citi Bike was used an average of 3.62 times per day. That is a big change to street usage that will make biking safer and more attractive in our neighborhood!

So now Citi Bike is finally here in the area we all live in. It's a novel experience for your author as well, but I have already used it to grab some takeout from a new place in Astoria I hadn't been to and I look forward to the increased convenience and mobility it brings. How will you use bike share this summer? I'd be curious to know! Send any questions or comments about bike share or biking in general to cyclopete@pm.me Ride safe, Woodside!

YOUTH BIKE JAMBOREE/ VACCINATION EVENT

Few things say summer more than kids riding bikes with their friends, and Queens Borough President Donovan Richards Jr. is inviting youth from across The World's Borough to do just that at Queens Borough Hall, where he will host his second annual Youth Bike Jamboree, this Saturday, July 16, from 12pm to 3pm.

The July 16 jamboree will also include a mobile COVID-19 vaccination clinic, courtesy of SOMOS Community Care, which will offer free vaccinations on-site for both adults and children as young as six months old.

"Last year's inaugural bike jamboree was an exciting success, as families from all corners of Queens came out to ride, dance, grab free giveaways and enjoy a summer Saturday with their neighbors. The 2022 iteration should be just as fun, and I hope to see as many smiling faces as possible at Borough Hall this Saturday," said Borough President RICHARDS. "My team and I are looking forward to welcoming families to the People's House for a day of fun and friendship, while also working to keep our communities protected from the dangers posed by COVID-19."

During the jamboree, kids will be invited to gather in Parking Lot A directly behind Borough Hall to ride their bicycles, play games, take part in dancing lessons courtesy of Ballroom Basix, have their bike helmets fitted and more. Free bicycle helmets will be given to the first 100 children who RSVP and attend the event while 10 bicycles will also be raffled off, courtesy of the Nigel Sylvester Foundation.

Members of the public who wish to attend should RSVP at www.queensbp.org/RSVP.

The Basis of Venue is that the subject action is situated in Queens County. To the above named Defendants—YOU ARE HEREBY SUMMONED to answer the Complaint in this action and to serve a copy of your answer, or, if the complaint is not served with this Summons, to serve a notice of appearance, on the Plaintiff's Attorney(s) within 20 days after the service of this Summons, exclusive of the day of service (or within 30 days after the service is complete if this Summons is not personally delivered to you within the State of New York); the United States of America may appear or answer within 60 days of service hereof; and in case of your failure to appear or answer, judgment will be taken against you by default for the relief demanded in the Complaint. That this Supplemental Summons is being filed pursuant to an order of the court dated February 21, 2020. NOTICE-YOU ARE IN DANGER OF LOSING YOUR HOME – If you do not respond to this summons and complaint by serving a copy of the answer on the attorney for the mortgage company who filed this foreclosure proceeding against you and filing the answer with the court, a default judgment may be entered and you can lose your home. Speak to an attorney or go to the court where your case is pending for further information on how to answer the summons and protect your property. Sending a payment to the mortgage company will not stop the foreclosure action. YOU MUST RESPOND BY SERVING A COPY OF THE ANSWER ON THE ATTORNEY FOR THE PLAINTIFF (MORTGAGE COMPANY) AND FILING THE ANSWER WITH THE COURT. HELP FOR HOMEOWNERS IN FORECLOSURE; New York State law requires that we send you this notice about the foreclosure process. Please read it carefully. SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT You are in danger of losing your home. If you fail to respond to the Summons and Complaint in this Foreclosure Action, you may lose your home. Please read the Summons and Complaint carefully. You should immediately contact an attorney of your local legal aid office to obtain advice on how to protect yourself. SOURCES OF INFORMATION AND ASSISTANCE The State encourages you to become informed about your options in foreclosure. In addition to seeking assistance from an attorney or legal aid office, there are government agencies and non-profit organizations that you may contact for information about possible options, including trying to work with your lender during this process. To locate an entity near you, you may call the toll-free helpline maintained by the New York State Department of Financial Services' at 1-800-269-0990 or visit the Department's website at <http://www.dfs.ny.gov>. FORECLOSURE RESCUE SCAMS Be careful of people who approach you with offers to "save" your home. There are individuals who watch for notices of foreclosure actions in order to unfairly profit from a homeowner's distress. You should be extremely careful about any such promises and any suggestions that you pay them a fee or sign over your deed. State law requires anyone offering such services for profit to enter into a contract which fully describes the services they will perform and fees they will charge, and which prohibits them from taking any money from you until they have completed all such promised services. We are attempting to collect a debt. Any information obtained will be used for that purpose. The foregoing summons is served upon you by publication pursuant to an order of the Honorable Kevin J. Kerrigan dated February 21, 2020 and filed February 26, 2020. Which masks provide the most protection against COVID-19?

- N95, KN95, or KF94
N95 and other higher-grade masks provide the best protection, but only if they are well-fitted and comfortable enough to be worn properly.
- Double Mask
Wearing a cloth mask over a disposable mask can give you added protection by creating a snugger fit and adding layers of material.
- Disposable Mask
Disposable masks are less effective than N95, KN95, and KF94 masks but provide better protection than cloth masks.
- Cloth Mask
Using a cloth mask alone offers less protection, but any cloth mask is better than no mask.
