Utility and Project Development/Project Management

Providing utility for an NFT is a project. There are a lot of logistics involved in providing the utility that is promised with the purchase of a digital asset. The production of this utility involves critical thinking and integrating Web3 with applications and services that are currently available. The technology and climate are evolving so rapidly that what was efficient today can quickly become obsolete.

Developing the structure of a project is a task as well. Each asset collection should be thought of as a business and have a business model, carefully documented assets created, and developing the strategy of keeping track of assets and delivering on utility.

Utility and project development has a base service fee of $500 with an additional cost of $55 an hour for project management/utility management postproduction. Additional cost will be added and addressed if additional technology and resources are needed to be built/acquired to deliver the utility promised.
