Part I, Line 2:

The Nancy Owens Breast Cancer Foundation provides funds to one or more qualified public charities that support education, care, and research to ultimately find a cure for breast cancer. The public charities apply to the Foundation by submitting a project they request funds to support. Once projects are submitted, they are presented to the committee for a vote to determine which project to follow; once projects to follow are selected, the doctors visit the committee and present their projects. The committee then decides how to distribute the funds that will be donated to the projects.

The projects are followed each year, and a report is given at the annual luncheon that reveals what efforts and accomplishments have been made with each project. The results are posted to the Nancy Owens Breast Cancer Foundation website in the "Updates to the Lab" section.
