Hello ADK HOG! The winter is flying by! Our Road Captains got together & scheduled more great rides this year. There is a good mix of rides with something that should appeal to everyone. We have some new road captains this year with some fresh ideas. Punxsutawney Phil says we should have some rides in late April.

Chrissy McCormack attended a HOG Revolution, Utica (NYS Rally) meeting in January. Please see the proposed schedule later in this newsletter. The website is also up & running.

Stop by McDermott's & check out the new bikes. There are some WILD colors & paint jobs. Cabin Fever is also coming up March 25th.

There are spots open at HOT (HOG Officer Training) if anyone wants to attend. You don't have to be an officer to attend. Contact me if you are interested. The training is in Buffalo April 7-8.

That's about all I have for now, one of our cats is HOGging the keyboard! Art P.

Historian; Jake Delgaudio: “Blurbs Blog”: Greenwich, A Brief History Part I...This is the next town to be featured in the local history series! All historical information below is gathered from various internet sources, town historians, Wikipedia, and so forth. That being said, grab a cup of coffee or whatever you drink, and read about Greenwich, NY! And remain calm and don’t panic as Part II is next month!

History of Greenwich

Greenwich had an important, well documented role in the abolition of slavery and an important part in the Underground Railroad”. This month’s edition will begin with a close look at this topic and continue on in the months ahead!

The abolition of slavery was a cause that many local people were actively involved in. Dr. Hiram Corliss guided the movement in Greenwich. His son, George Corliss, was the inventor of the Corliss Steam Engine. Legend has it that Dr. Corliss was one of the founders of the American Medical Association. An important “station” of the Underground Railway to Canada was located in Greenwich.

“ . . . The Mystery House, haunted by the escaping black man; with dark secret places and stealthy whispers, hasty coverings into friendly wagons for the further flight to the North, the station of the perilous `Underground Railway,' with no known conductors, no lights, no bells, and terrified fugitives seeking freedom, and finding help and advice and the friendly word.”

The above excerpt was written by a newspaper man in Greenwich, New York, in 1938. They were referring to the house below (next page) still prominent today, which was owned during the antebellum period by the lawyer Leonard Gibbs.

At left: Gibbs House, Greenwich, NY

Gibbs was the second most important person in the Underground Railroad in Union Village, which Greenwich was called then. Stories about him and the house had been passed down orally by his daughters who lived well into the 20th century. A native of the area,

Gibbs had moved to Union Village in 1845, after two years as a state representative and five years as a lawyer in Manhattan. He immediately joined the Free Congregational Church, which had formed as an antislavery church “Free Church” in 1837 under the leadership of Dr. Hiram Corliss (shown at right), the Adirondack region's leading abolitionist. That same year the first report of a fugitive slave seeking aid was reported in Emancipator and considering the strong abolitionist sentiment that had developed during the early 1830s, it's likely it was not the first.

Left:
Free
Church, Union Village, NY

Both Corliss and Gibbs were friends of Gerrit Smith, perhaps the most politically powerful abolitionist in the nation and certainly the richest. Documented evidence shows that Smith visited the village on multiple occasions, and Corliss was known to have visited Smith in Peterboro.

Many reports indicate fugitive slave traffic through the village and an important memoir passed down, written by Orrin B. Wilbur, describing his grandparents role in the neighboring Quaker village of Easton not only recalled several incidents when fugitive slaves were aided but also indicated that the Quakers there were closely connected to the abolitionists in Union Village. In 1851 they formed the Old Saratoga Anti-Slavery Society that unified the communities with Corliss being named president, and whose featured speaker at its 1852 annual meeting was William Lloyd Garrison.

The Champlain Canal passed through Easton, and documented evidence of its use by fugitive slaves was first reported in several antislavery newspapers in 1837. Farther north about three miles west of the canal, two curious artifacts remain, which have puzzled and fascinated area residents. The story goes they were guides for fugitive slaves leading them North to freedom.

The first one (Shown on the left) is in a rural section about 20 miles from Greenwich. Few if any black families live or have ever lived in this area. According to local records, this sign was painted around 1930 by a man whose family owned the house, at least as early as 1853. It replaced an earlier sign of a black hand pointing in the same direction, north, as the caricature.

The Guideboard Sign

About a quarter mile south of the sign is an even more curious artifact. According to its markings, it dates from 1841. No one knows how it got there or who carved the markings, but local historians believe it was a symbolic map for fugitive slaves. Age and the elements have worn away the original markings, but still very clear is the emboldened date—1841. (On the right is a drawing of that marker and at top of the next page a photo of the original) Originally, it had legs and its markings indicated May 23, 1841, and local historians have interpreted the hieroglyphics to represent a fort, a mountain, a smokestack, and a sailboat. Their juxtaposition portray actual locations of that period, in the form of a map.

The fort represents the village of Fort Ann; the mountain, a small range in that vicinity; the smokestack, a blast furnace that was operating then; and the sailboat, the boats awaiting in South Bay, the inlet to Lake Champlain which led directly to Canada.

Ok, so I am getting “long” with this very interesting topic! Next month Greenwich, Part II, the story continues... so stay tuned and be prepared for another long article!

Just sharing some History!

*It is such a pleasure to ride with you all!

Safety Officer; Jake Delgaudio: “February 2017 Blurbs Blog”!

This month will be an assortment of blurbs and reminders pertaining not only to Winter Safety but rather for ALL natural disasters and being prepared. FEMA and the Red Cross are great websites to visit for expanded information. Below I will just give a brief synopsis! First and foremost is to:

Put Together a Supply Kit! Be sure to include:

Water—at least a 3-day supply; one gallon per person per day. So a family of 3 for example would need 9 gallons water for a 3 day event. You would of course want additional water for cooking, cleaning etc.

Food—at least a 3-day supply of non-perishable, easy-to-prepare food. Peanut Butter & Jelly, saltines, Tuna (have a hand crank can opener stored away too) etc. Be sure you have a good supply of protein foods included...so don't just stash the Twinkies and think you are set!

Picture at right is a kit the Red Cross Sells in their online store. You can go there and look at what they include and make your own! Link:

Flashlight.... Battery-powered or hand-crank radio (NOAA Weather Radio, if possible). Flashlight can be hand crank also! I keep one of those in each vehicle and on my bike. The regular flashlights batteries always went dead on me. Love these as always a way to get some light! Make sure you also have Extra batteries, First aid kit and some type of Multi-Purpose tool

Medications: (7-day supply) and medical items (hearing aids with extra batteries, glasses, contact lenses, syringes, etc.)

Sanitation and personal hygiene items

Copies of personal documents (medication list and pertinent medical information, proof of address, deed/lease to home, passports, birth certificates, insurance policies)

Cell phone with chargers and Family and emergency contact information

Extra cash...Baby supplies (bottles, formula, baby food, diapers)...Pet supplies (collar, leash, ID, food, carrier, bowl)...Tools/supplies for securing your home

Sand, rock salt or non-clumping kitty litter to make walkways and steps less slippery during winter...and Warm coats, gloves or mittens, hats, boots and extra blankets and warm clothing for all household members (during winter)

Ample alternate heating methods such as fireplaces or wood- or coal-burning stoves handy for warmth and also cooking. Be careful what you use and about carbon monoxide in your home!

Being prepared is just the right thing to do and provides peace of mind! For more expanded information visit the FEMA website at <https://www.fema.gov/plan-prepare> or Red Cross website at <http://www.redcross.org/get-help/prepare-for-emergencies/types-of-emergencies/winter-storm#Respond-During>

It is such a pleasure to ride with you all!
