Refusés of the Bay is a collaborative art project of two curated exhibitions by Bay Area artists whose work was inexplicably overlooked by the jurors of The de Young Open 2023.

“Refusés of the Bay” is a tribute to the 1863 Salon des Refusés, which showcased rejected artwork from the highly acclaimed Paris Salon, featuring a staggering two-thirds of the submitted work that was not initially chosen. This renegade art fair included emerging works from James McNeill Whistler, Édouard Manet, Camille Pissarro, and other world-renowned artists whose careers took off after the show.

My friends and I are those people you see at the museum, standing as close as security will let us to a painting, trying to see that brush stroke up close.

I'm an environmental woman artist inspired by the landscape and wildlife of Sonoma and Marin counties, particularly the wetlands along the Petaluma River and San Pablo Bay. My work is about this place, the natural world of the North Bay, combining representation with abstraction.

After working as an illustrator since the early 1990s, I am now painting full time and my paintings are part of collections across the United States, the UK and New Zealand.

I live and paint in Petaluma California with cartoonist husband, Pete McDonnell, our son Jacob and studio dog Mollie.

Primarily I paint in acrylic on wood panels in the studio, or on location around Sonoma and Marin Counties.

I have an optimistic view of the regenerative power of nature when aware humans intercede.
