AN EFFECTIVE MARKETING STRATEGY SHOULD ADDRESS THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS:

Who are my potential customers?

What are my customers buying habits?

How large is my target market?

How much are customers willing to pay for my product?

Who are my main competitors?

What are my competitors' strengths and weaknesses?

ARE YOU AWARE OF THE MARKETING MIX?

PRODUCT, PRICE, PLACE AND PROMOTION.

THESE ARE THE FOUR KEY FACTORS OF A SUCCESSFUL MARKETING STRATEGY AND ARE USED TO DETERMINE HOW A COMPANY CAN BEST REACH ITS TARGET MARKET.

Product

Product elements in marketing involve how a product is presented to the public, including packaging, pricing, and promotions. Product elements in marketing aim to create a positive perception of the product in the minds of potential customers.

Price

It is the only element that generates revenue, thus it is important to set the right price for a product or service. Price should also be adjusted to reflect changes in market conditions, competition and other factors.

Place

Place elements in marketing refer to the physical locations and environments in which a product or service is advertised and sold. Examples of place elements include retail stores, shopping malls, trade shows and online markets.

Promotion

Promotions are an important part of any marketing strategy. They help to increase sales and build brand awareness. Promotions can also be used to reward loyal customers or encourage new customers to try a product or service.
