That full persuasion of the reality of divine things, that simple rest on the promises, that peace through atoning blood, and that soul supporting hope in God in His mercy, care, and love, which the believer feels, are all produced by the Holy Spirit...These pardon ones are known by the aspect and feelings of their minds toward that from which they are delivered; they hate sin, pray against it, and seek to mortify it. They also have peculiar feelings toward Him, by whom sin is removed: When they gaze on Calvary and see the Holy One bearing their sins in His own body on the tree, then the love of Christ constrains them, and they dare not, they cannot, live to themselves, but to him who died for them. Again, they are distinguished by their estimate of the divine character; those who taste that God's mercy is sweet, behold a beauty in His holiness long and aim to be loyal subjects to their pardoning God. His whole character appears glorious in their view, His presence desirable, His authority and commands most wise and gracious...Those who truly hate sin, sincerely love the Savior, and spiritually know God, are pardoned, are reconciled.
