

Corrupted Politician Rewarded

By his globalist handlers raping the 3rd world and we are next...

JOSEPHINE CASHMAN
12 FEB 2023

Ben Wyatt is totally corrupt.

Ben Wyatt is the previous Treasurer and Minister for aboriginal affairs in the Western Australian Government. Ben is the nephew of the former Liberal aboriginal affairs Minister Ken Wyatt.

Ben is one of the few who has greatly benefited from the Juukan hoax. Yet he is now lecturing the world on Corporate governance and this month he will be all over the AICD (Australian Institute of Company Directors).

Ben knew the Juukan artifacts were fossilised dung, as mentioned in a 2009 expert report ¹ and the basis upon which the WA government in 2013 approved the destruction of the Juukan site. ²

Ben Wyatt is rewarded for framing a whistleblower trying to stop impoverished African countries from being raped of their natural resources which does not benefit the people rather the profits go offshore to secret jurisdictions where they pay no tax leaving these countries broke despite them producing so much in valuable raw materials. Then taxpayers in western countries like Australia, the United States, New Zealand and Canada pay for humanitarian aid to these countries that are deprived of their right to independence. It is a rot! ³

Silencing a whistleblowers Voice

In 2016 RIO CEO Jean-Sébastien Jacques uncovered a corruption scandal in Guinea involving the former Rio CEO, Sam Walsh, Tony Blair & George Soros; they're still being investigated (in the Simandou affair).⁴

African Guinea had made a deal with the richest man in Israel that would have seen their gross domestic profit double. Globalist oligarchy did not want Africa independent so they sent in Walsh, Blair and Soros to destroy the deal, with election interference, personal attacks and bribes - their standard color revolution tactics.⁵

The Juukan Hoax was a media storm of fake outrage for a site that was not sacred. The Juukan false flag was designed to publicly disgrace and shame the whistleblower Jean-Sébastien Jacques blaming him for destroying a sacred site, Juukan blast was prearranged to silence him in relation to the allegations against the imperial handlers of Tony Blair and George Soros ripping off impoverished Africa.⁶

Ben's corruption windfall

How dare he? Ben Wyatt's lack of integrity is simply staggering. Because a cave has been legally blasted, he is now a member of the Board of Woodside and Rio Tinto. Seriously?

Maybe he should explain to the rest of us why the Juukan caves became sacred just before being blasted? Or maybe Mr Wyatt should explain what he did to prevent the blast? Anything? Nope, nothing at all. Of course not. Because, you see, it's not his fault.

Wyatt distorts the facts

🔒 aicd.com.au

Joining Rio Tinto

Wyatt was Aboriginal affairs minister in the WA government when Rio Tinto blew up two ancient rock shelters at Juukan Gorge in the Pilbara. The incident triggered an international controversy and the eventual resignation of the CEO and chair. The destruction of the caves had been approved in a deal between Rio Tinto and the land's traditional owners (the Puutu Kunti Kurrama and Pinikura peoples) seven years earlier, before Wyatt became a minister. (A federal inquiry heard that Rio Tinto had not told the traditional owners there were other options aside from the destruction of the site.)

Rio Tinto had also been severely criticised in a WA parliamentary inquiry for its workplace culture. Last year, the company commissioned an independent review by former Australian Sex Discrimination Commissioner Elizabeth Broderick AO, which found a systemic organisational culture of bullying, harassment and racism in the organisation.

See more here: <https://www.aicd.com.au/corporate-governance-sectors/indigenous/business/the-lone-ranger.html>

Here is the evidence: Mr Wyatt mentions in the AICD article that:

'The destruction of the caves had been approved in a deal between Rio Tinto and the land's traditional owners (the Puutu Kunti Kurrama and Pinikura peoples) seven years earlier, before Wyatt became a minister. (A federal inquiry heard that Rio Tinto had not told the traditional owners there were other options aside from the destruction of the site).'

If that's the case, then why was the former CEO Jean-Sebastian Jacques, who wasn't in charge when the authorization to blast was given in 2013, held accountable for something he didn't do and wasn't aware of? Where is your integrity Mr Wyatt? So why is it Mr Jacques' fault and not yours -he was even less involved than you in 2013?

As for the other options to mine the sites, why didn't Sam Walsh, who was in charge of the iron ore operations and Kellie Parker, who was in charge of the permitting, called to account? Could Mr Wyatt please answer this? Because facts matter...

Mr Wyatt continues with even more virtue-signaling: 'Rio Tinto had also been severely criticised in a WA parliamentary inquiry for its workplace culture. Last year, the company commissioned an independent review by former Australian Sex Discrimination Commissioner Elizabeth Broderick AO, which found a systemic organisational culture of bullying, harassment and racism in the organisation.'

Seriously? If anything, the WA inquiry on FIFO workers has shown that Rio Tinto was far better than the other mining companies...Or at least, if Mr Wyatt had an ounce of integrity, he should have said that there is a problem in the mining industry. But of course, he didn't. And what did Mr Wyatt do when there was a rape on one of Rio Tinto's sites: <https://news.yahoo.com/rio-tinto-says-employee-sexually-061729922.html>?

It was on your watch, Mr Wyatt, wasn't it? It hadn't happened before, when according to you the culture was so bad...You can't blame the previous management team for once. So what did you do to address the problem exactly? Because I will tell you this: I talked to various Rio Tinto employees and was told that Jean-Sebastian Jacques did terminate dozens of employees for sexual harassment, bullying, or simply for fiddling with their expenses. And unlike Mr Sam Walsh, he didn't need two parking spaces to park his expensive Bentley and didn't have an affair with his PA. On which side are you Mr Wyatt? Don't you think it's time to address the facts instead of playing politics? What did YOU do exactly to address the issues? I can't see anything in your article. Your silence speaks volumes. You are out of your depth. You just talk the talk, and nothing more. Shame on you!

Wyatt is not the sort of Voice Australia needs

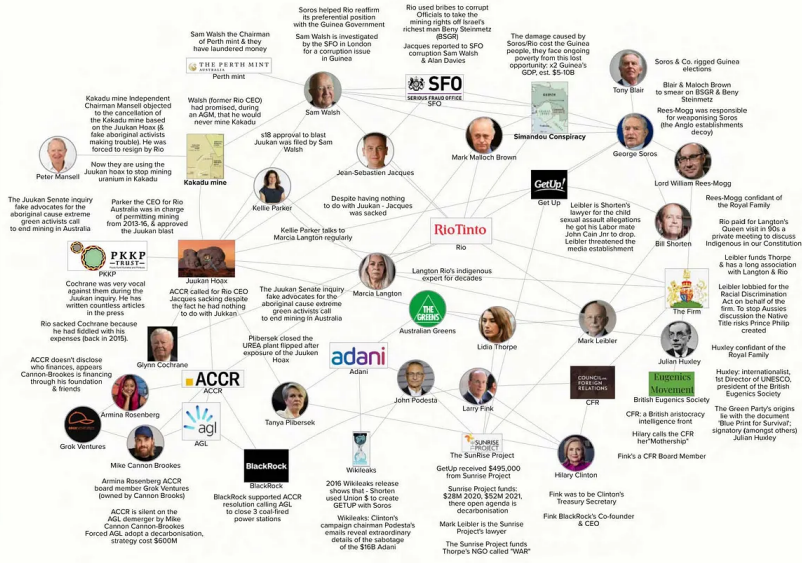

This is exactly why we don't need a Voice: we need doers and people who actually care about the community. We don't need people like Mr Ben Wyatt who's in it to line his pockets Mr Wyatt, I can see through you: you're a disgrace to your People.

A 2009 report confirms: •The Juukan artifacts were fossilised dung •And the fossilized dung was duly excavated and stored on site •The artifacts (fossilized dung) were not damaged and were carefully stored in a container researchgate.net/publication/26...

Juukan-1 is a south facing ironstone rockshelter approximately 25 m width, 8 m deep, and has a dripline about 10 m high. The site features a higher collapsing rear chamber and an open entrance area set at a slightly lower level with a lot of roof fall separating the two areas. The floor of the rear chamber consists of soft sediment that slopes down from the rear. Flaked stone material was recorded along the front of the site, particularly in the western end of the shelter.
During August 2008 a single 1x1m test pit was excavated in the front chamber of the rockshelter. Excavations reached a depth of 75 cm below the surface where a level of solid roof fall or bedrock was encountered. The stratigraphy of the test pit consisted of three main layers: a topsoil of loose material overlying brown/grey compacted sediment with many organic finds, which in turn overlies a horizon of orange/brown. A small pink/white lens of soft chalky material was also noted at a depth of approximately 40 to 50 cm below the surface, as were small lenses of charcoal (Figure 3).
A series of three radiocarbon determinations show that discard of cultural material occurred at Juukan-1 from as early as 32,950 ± 270 BP (conventional radiocarbon age) (Beta-249759) at a depth of 60 cm. Until 35 cm below the surface, which is dated to 26,640 ± 160 BP (conventional radiocarbon age) (Beta-249758), sediment accumulation and artefact discard were slow. From this point however, a generally more rapid accumulation rate is proposed extending to recent times with a near surface age determination of 760 ± 40 BP (conventional radiocarbon age) (Beta-249757) (740-660 cal. yr BP).
A total of thirty two stone artefacts were recovered from Juukan-1. The majority of these occurred in spits 1 and 2, with only individual artefacts recorded in lower spits. The lowest artefact recovered from the site however was found in spit 14 at a depth of approximately 70 cm, underlying the

In addition to flaked stone, a total of 67 fragments of animal bone were recovered, of which 57 were identifiable. Species identified included bandicoot, kangaroo, wallaroo, native mouse, rat and one fish fragment (Table 1). Animal bone from small to large species was recovered from most spits, with the exception of spit 9, with the majority of the bone belonging to medium-large macropods. Overall faunal density is consistently small, with the exception of spit 12, in which nearly 50% of the recovered bone was found (Figure 4). All bone is highly fragmented with long bone shaft fragments accounting for 66% of the bone recovered, followed by teeth (9%) (Figure 5).

Macropus rufus	Red kangaroo	13	23%
Macropus robustus	Common wallaroo	40	70%
Isodonta sp.	Bandicoot	1	<2%
Pseudomys sp.	Native mouse	1	<2%

•The local aboriginal group (the PKKP) did not object to on authorisation granted by the WA government to blast the Juukan sites on 31 December 2013 riotinto.com/news/releases/...

- 46 On 1 May 2008, a section 16 permit was granted for the collection of Aboriginal cultural materials, test-pitting and excavation for the purposes of archaeological investigation at Juukan 1 and Juukan 2 (among other sites). This permit noted that additional ethnographic inspection was required to record the sites to a level suitable for presentation to the APMC for the purposes of the section 18 application to disturb these sites.
- 47 On 17 October 2013, Rio Tinto submitted a section 18 notice to disturb a range of sites, including Juukan 1 and Juukan 2 (Section 18 Notice). This included an assessment of the significance of these sites. More detail on this application is set out in section 3.6 below.
- 48 Rio Tinto sought consent to disturb Juukan 1 and Juukan 2 on the express basis that consent to impact the sites was conditional on further salvage being carried out (consistent with archaeological and ethnographical recommendations and the PKKP's wishes).
- 49 On 31 December 2013, the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs granted Rio Tinto section 18 consent to use the Land, for the Purpose (being the development of Pit One at Brockman 4). This was subject to one condition - requiring Rio Tinto to report, on completion of mining, any sites impacted and any salvage that was conducted (Section 18 Consent).
- 50 Consultation with the PKKP on these section 16 and section 18 applications, and the PKKP's involvement in the archaeological and ethnographic work that was required to make these applications and obtain these approvals, is set out in detail in section 3.2-3.6 below.

The Soros-Rio Tinto scandal just won't go away.

When Israeli billionaire Beny Steinmetz got in a tug-of-war over African mineral rights with Anglo-Australian mining giant Rio Tinto, Soros jumped in, hitting Steinmetz with a global smear campaign.

Why did Soros get involved?
