

Nolalu Fire Rescue and First Respo...

2h · 🌐

Tuesday July 14 - 830am

Good morning, Nolalu residents.

We're sure many of you had a sleepless night. We did too.

We received an update from the MNR this morning. The good news is that the fire did not spread significantly overnight. They are assembling crews this morning to continue suppression efforts, and once they are actively working the fire, we'll be able to provide a more detailed update.

The wind did shift overnight, as expected, and is now pushing the fire more toward the Whitefish Lake area. This is the scenario we were anticipating, which is why our members went door-to-door yesterday evening to speak with affected residents.

At this time, there is NO evacuation order in place. However, the evacuation pre-warning remains in effect. If an evacuation does become necessary, it may need to happen with very little notice. We are asking everyone in the affected area to be prepared by having a bag packed with essential items and a plan in place so you can leave quickly if an evacuation order is issued.

We know the uncertainty is difficult, but please be assured that we, along with our partners at the MNR who are actively fighting this fire, are monitoring the situation closely.

We'll continue to share updates as soon as we receive new information. Thank you for your patience, your preparedness, and for looking out for one another.

Chief Shoemaker

Sent from my iPhone