

RUNS, RUNS AND MORE RUNS

Week three saw no change in momentum for us. Scores going off the board with regularity all last week.

Another 13 got knocked down Monday by the Brewers, a promising start to the week for newcomer Colin Reed. They did it again on Thursday! Sorry Colin-no extra credit for that.

The Rockies matched that on Wednesday for Bobby Higgins, now 5 teams have bagged the most difficult number.

The Nats wasted a golden opportunity to do the same, scoring a totally unnecessary run in the ninth to put them at 14, much to Louis Adams' chagrin.

Lots of excitement on Saturday. Two teams blew past the magic #13, Guardians and Pirates, breaking the hearts of Bev Liedler and Carolyn Johnson.

As for standings, the three leaders from last week couldn't score a single needed number between them. Quite rare. They've been passed by some and tied by others. The Blue Jays checked off 4 boxes to take the solo lead. KJ — don't book that cruise yet. 'Ya only need two numbers but it's the 12 and 13.

Talk next week. See Bobs attached updated grid for the details.
