

BRACKET NEWS

Masters

"Unfit news that I'll still Print"

Edition

Masters Time

Golf Time

Lying peacefully-
in state of hibernation
How hard could it be?

Final Day of Making Hay

(or is that Pine Straw)

Sooo many golfers had a chance to wrestle that jacket away from Rory, but in the end, no one could. For the most part the course and conditions were cooperative. The Wind, that dries the grounds and drives the balls, was much less a factor than anticipated. Most wayward shots were a result of players trying to be too accurate and missing their targets only to skitter into trouble.

And maybe there was a bit of Divine Intervention. While Mr. McIlroy consistently demonstrated his prodigious power off the tee, ranking first for the tournament, his accuracy did not make the trip to Augusta. He was 90th out of 91 in fairways found.

Did the pine trees, like helicopter parents, conspire to insure him an escape route at every opportunity? It certainly appears so. Or did we just see a Masterful performance from the Houdini of Hackouts. Hmm?