

The Tornado of Right and Wrong

Once there was a normal kid named Kevin who was walking in the baseball field. After a long day of jokes, pranks, and teasing at school, he went to get some fresh air. "I am the best at everything!" he said to himself. "No one is better than me!" Then, the ground shook, wind started, and a big hole appeared in the ground! "Cool!" he said. "Maybe if I jump in, I'll find treasure and get rich!" So, he jumped into the hole waiting to hit the bottom. It took rather long to hit bottom, but he liked the air passing by him, and soon he hit the ground beneath.

Unfortunately, he fell flat on his face. "I was hoping the treasure was a swimming pool, that way, I could put it here and I wouldn't have a rough landing," he thought. Kevin found a tunnel and walked for some time. He soon found a giant circle that looked like it was made of glass. "What is this?" he said, confused. "It is floating in mid air." Kevin tried to touch the floating circle, but his hand went THROUGH the floating object. "What the-?" he said, while he put his arm through the now-what-he-just-had-realized was a portal. Kevin put his body through the portal....to find that the other side was face DOWN and it made him fall in sand. "Pssshhh" he said, trying to get the taste of sand out of his mouth. The place he landed was a big desert where the smell of rust was strong. "The smell of rust is gross, and there's not anything in sight! Except that big tornado over there." Kevin said. "Wait, a TORNADO?" Kevin was right, a huge tornado was coming his way, and getting closer. He knew because he could hear it.

Behind him was a mountain range, so he couldn't run. He soon got sucked up in the tornado, but he was strangely walking in mid air. Kevin saw all the things he did in school. Whoopee cushion, wedgies, and tons more. Soon the tornado spit him out, and he found a book that had a gem in it. Kevin opened the book and saw all the things that happened because of the jokes and pranks he did at school. The stuff was so horrible that I can not explain it. Kevin saw the tornado coming again and instead of running away he ran towards it. He got sucked up again on purpose and touched every image of the pranks, and then he changed them so he didn't do any of them. He got spit out of the tornado and found his way back to the portal again. He went back to the baseball field.

Everything that said would happen in the book didn't happen, and he was so relieved. "Phew!" he said to himself. Kevin knew that even without a magic portal and tornado, you can still have a second chance and do things right.

