To his credit, Tesla invented Photoshop in 1899 with his composite picture of him sitting there inside his Colorado Springs Lab. Either way, the Tyrannasaur bone, rock, fossil fuel tooth looking thing you have might catch $10M on eBay. The 800,000 documents, newspapers, articles and 900 patents and Inventions at the Tesla Museum much available online to find in 5 seconds is "made up"? You must have also worked for the 13 companies Doctor Tesla owned, have his 600 missing patents and Inventions (900 FBI File) and read the 400,000 documents at the Tesla Museum. Was it you that compiled the Colorado Springs Notes in 1955, from events that took place in 1899, or is it 1889 according Tesla at his Wardencllyffe appeal. You must be sure "he had it all in his head". Of course it also helps to have the other 400,000 documents, 40 trunk's, 30 bundles, a safe and a multi-decade resistance box you were able to crack, which John G Trump admitting reviewed in Tesla's NY storage unit and also have seen the two pictures of everything the FBI said they took. Sava Kosanovich told the FBI under oath that the 200 page notebook Tesla was writing, was also missing. You must have snatched that too! Even beyond that, you must have gotten access to Einstein's brain held in (according to Tesla, non destructive) cryogenic freezing at CERN. And of course you are aware that Tesla has the earliest patent for superconductivity "Means for increasing electrical intensity oscillations using cold temperature" in 1900. As you know, CERN gets it's superconductive gasses like Krypton using a Westinghouse Nuclear Power Plant or Tesla's Electrical method using his 1897 Patent and Apparatus for producing Ozone and other gasses. The point being, with Einstein's brain you can figure out Nuclear Power and the Nuclear Bomb Hoax, since, according to UN and US law, Nuclear is considered "classified on birth". It's a benefit if you can speak and write 13 languages, because his Serbian handwriting is terrible. Like all other great minds study scientists before them, it's also great that you have the 1000 points of lights, tubes that Tesla said under oath of his 1922 Supreme Court foreclosure appeals case, that each light described a scientific secret. We're all glad you have that, because, it's been missing since 1943. Since Fitzgerald told the FBI director in 1945 that because the Russians had access to the "Entire Tesla Collection" behind the Iron Curtain, and because of experiments going on at Hill AFB, that he was soliciting Army Intelligence and "Wealthy Backers" like the Ford Foundation, to accumulate all they can on Tesla's effects and turn them into "Idea Factories". You being a double-agent for the Army and the Air Force, and a Russian agent would be the coup de gras; you might even get to work for Alex Jones at Infowars. If you could return those audio recordings of Tesla's real voice and videos of the real person, since they are also ALL missing, that would be great. If you could just fallaciously go back in time like Einstein said, then you could have asked Tesla's financier in Radio, Peck, his financiers John Astor & JP Morgan, his last co-designer in Wardencllyffe, the famous Stanford White or even President William McKinley what they knew about Wireless Power and the Death Ray, because they were all assassinated. Granted, Tesla did tell JP Morgan that if he did not provide the next $250,000 or more to finish Wardencllyffe that you, JP Morgan would "Never see that machinery". But, since Tesla stated in his 1919 Autobiography in Electrical Experimenter, he wanted to dispell a rumor in the press about the destruction of his tower, Wardencllyffe, he said "They were building more of them". In the same Autobiography he states "every one of my Inventions prior to 1919 worked 100% as he prescribed". Days after Tesla dies, Spanel tells the FBI that Fitzgerald told him that Tesla had "completed and perfected" wireless power transmission and that the main goal of Tesla's latest works was to provide electricity to the world absolutely for free. Your funny. Some morons still think they want to debunk anything on this channel. Problem is, they have to debunk Nikola Tesla, the Patent Office and Supreme Court, just to start. And, you never know who your talking to on the Internet. This particular poster and his relative are world record, national qualifying, all American, school record holders that haven't been beat in 30 years; and we ran on dirt. You can't run. I run a consistent 4.4.4.5 40 yard dash for 11 years straight and have the highest top speed of any competitor in the 4X100 meter relay. I can throw a football 60 miles an hour, all day long. My relative can dunk from the free throw line like Michael Jordan and high jump 7 feet; and even jump over a car. If you still think you can run and hide, my relative runs a 4.5 minute mile, along with 9 other events over two days. It was stated publicly by a prominent NFL football player that he was "the greatest athlete he has ever seen". Three of my coaches are still in professional sports and one was the US Olympics head coach. And that's not all, I scored the highest score in the World in Astronomy four, with the highest grade in all that took the class over 5 years, and scored a 102% on the final exam, which had only a 100% top score possibility. How was that done? After the final, the teacher and I debated a question about Einstein's "event horizon problem". After 5 minutes of discussion, I debunked Einstein, in 1996. Before that, I scored the same in High School; and even built a small scale model of a Nuclear Power Plant, 6 months before the hippies and actors went in to block Nuclear Power worldwide, starting with taking over the PG&E Diablo Nuclear Power Plant, illegally. So, good luck.

Voted the most Awesome, Epic Retort in Internet history with a call to shut-down the rest of the Internet! Response to those who claim "They know everything about "Nikola Tesla"", then claim they can "debunk" Tesla. To begin with, it's unlikely they know how to spell his name or where he is from, since the town he was born in doesn't exist anymore. Tesla Leaks has sourced the documents and admission by Tesla, Library of Congress in 1891, prior to 1897, his name is spelt with a (C) "Nicola Tesla" (see other variations in the comments below). <http://teslaleaks.com/> -- Tesla Leaks - Missing Patents & Inventions found under the name spelt "Nicola Tesla" <https://nikolateslasolar.blogspot.com/2017/01/tesla-leaks-nicola-tesla-missing.html> -- Some think that everything online about Tesla, is made up! Much of it is! But, how could you know "everything"? Have you read all the top secret documents in every country on Earth? You must work for the CIA! In fact, you must have written the entire un-redacted FBI File and the other 3 files referred to in the FBI File. Do you have the Alien skeletons too? And the real pictures of Space, not the 100% fake Photoshop pictures NASA puts out. Only "Space Raven" knows for sure. To his credit, Tesla invented Photoshop in 1899 with his composite picture of him sitting there inside his Colorado Springs Lab. Either way, the Tyrannasaur bone, rock, fossil fuel tooth looking thing you have might catch $10M on eBay. The 800,000 documents, newspapers, articles, Library of Congress and 900 patents and Inventions at the Tesla Museum; much available online to find in 5 seconds is "made up"? You must have also worked for the 13 companies Doctor Tesla owned, have his 600 missing patents and Inventions (900 FBI File) and read the 400,000 documents locked up at the Tesla Museum. You also must have worked at the Tesla society in 1915 during WW1, worked at his Museum that was bombed in WW2 and worked at the one that Bill Clinton bombed in 1999. It must have been a miracle that you survived the 10,000 tons of depleted Uranium NATO dropped on Serbia. Was it you that compiled the Colorado Springs Experiments Notes in 1955, published in 1978, from events that took place in 1899, or is it 1889 according Tesla at his Wardenclyffe appeal case. You must be sure "he had it all in his head". Of course it also helps to have the other 400,000 documents, 40 trunk's, 30 bundles, a safe and a multi-decade resistance box you were able to impossibly crack. Instead it was people who called themselves "government officials" and John G Trump who admitted reviewing the information in Tesla's NY storage unit. While you were there, you must have seen the two pictures of everything the FBI said they took. Sava Kosanovich told the FBI under oath that the 200 page notebook Tesla was writing before his death (hoax), was also missing. You must have snatched that too! Even beyond that, you must have gotten access to Einstein's brain held in (according to Tesla, non destructive) cryogenic freezing at CERN. And of course you are aware that Tesla has the earliest patent for superconductivity "Means for increasing electrical intensity using cold temperature" in 1900. you in to analyze the Tesla papers, instead of the FBI bringing in Deforest. If you're right there like his Assistants Marconi, Hammond, Kolman Tzito Father and Son, Lowenstein, Scherff, Hettinger or agents Spanel & Fitzgerald, you might have seen it all. Were you the get away driver in the movie "Fragments from Olympus" that tells the story of real-life FBI agents P. E Foxworth and Dennis Haberfeld, who died on January 15, 1943 during the posthumous investigation of Nikola Tesla's property? The mission described by FBI documents as being part of "a secret mission of critical importance"; the two were killed on their way to General Eisenhower when their military transport mysteriously crashed. The cause of the crash was never ascertained. It must have been the faulty Autonomous driving technology that crashed the 2 truck loads of Tesla's effects. Like other great minds study scientists before them, it's also great that you have the 1000 points of lights and tubes that Tesla said he had in a separate room on the Wardenclyffe property up until 1907, under oath in his 1922 Supreme Court foreclosure appeals case. Each light he said "described a unique scientific discovery". We're all glad you have that, because, it's been missing since mentioned in the Wardenclyffe appeal. Since Fitzgerald told the FBI director in 1945 that because the Russians had access to the "Entire Tesla Collection" behind the Iron Curtain, and because of experiments going on at Hill AFB, that he was soliciting Army Intelligence and "Wealthy Backers" like the Ford Foundation, to accumulate all they can on Tesla's effects and turn them into "Idea Factories". You being a double-agent for the Army and the Air Force, and a Russian agent would be the coup de gras; you might even get to work for Alex Jones at Infowars. If you could return those audio recordings of Tesla's real voice and videos of the real person, since they are also ALL missing, that would be great. If you could just fallaciously go back in time like Einstein said, then you could have asked Tesla's financier in Radio, Peck, his financiers John Astor & JP Morgan, his last co-designer in Wardenclyffe, the famous Stanford White, friend witness and politician Mark Twain, or even President William McKinley who was shot immediately after touring the Westinghouse, Tesla Hydro-electric plant at Niagara Falls; what they knew about Wireless Power and the Death Ray, because they were all assassinated. Within the same year, Nikola Tesla told JP Morgan that the Niagara electric company already approved Tesla using 10,000 horsepower from the Niagara Falls generators for wireless power. Tesla even offered the electric company stock in his company. Tesla told Morgan that he, Tesla, had secured all worldwide rights to his and the only practical method to generate, "Trillions" of simultaneous, secure, pulse-width and pulse-position modulated (Terrestrial GPS) radio signals. By March 8th 1907, prior to the 1907 stock market crash that bankrupt Westinghouse & Tesla, Tesla secured "all" patents on what he calls "Tuned Lightening", the processes, appliances, generation, transmission, transformation, distribution, direction, storage, regulation, control and economic utilization. Two months later after the stock market crash in 1907, the patent office accepted his refiling of his patent for the Wardenclyffe Tower Structure, but did not approve the patent until 1914. This delay gave time for the Federal Reserve Act to be passed to create a Fiat money system, and when WW1 started. Then, in WW1, the supposed entire world attacked Tesla's hometown, Serbia. But, you knew all that! Granted, a few years earlier, Tesla did tell JP Morgan that if he did not provide the next $250,000 or more to finish Wardenclyffe that you, JP Morgan would "Never see that machinery" (the final pieces that included the high tension UV generator to be placed in the Wardenclyffe Tower Cupola and Spark-Gap controls within the Tower structure). Since Tesla mentioned to Morgan that he, Tesla, was responsible for more than $6 Trillion in sales to industry based on his inventions, that this venture would work as sure as "my name is Tesla". But later in Tesla's 1919 Autobiography in Electrical Experimenter, he wanted to dispell a rumor in the press about the destruction of his tower, Wardenclyffe, he said "They were building more of them". In the same Autobiography he states "every one of my Inventions prior to 1919 worked 100% as he prescribed". Fortunately, in Tesla's last publication in the 1920 Electrical Experimenter, Tesla gives credit to John Hays Hammond for his June 22nd 1917 patent which he says "makes wireless power possible". Days after Tesla dies, in a letter to the FBI director, Tesla tells Fitzgerald that his experiments in conjunction to the transmission of electrical power had been "completed and perfected" wireless power transmission and that the main goal of Tesla's latest works was to provide electricity to the world absolutely for free. Is Tesla lying? If you think so, prove it up! (Now you're looking for the secret, but you won't find it, because of course, you're not really looking, you don't want to work it out, ... You want to be Fooled! -- Ending sequence in The Prestige) <https://youtu.be/GZc3EsElqeA>

You must have also worked for the 13 companies Doctor Tesla owned, have his 600 missing patents and Inventions (900 FBI File) and read the 400,000 documents at the Tesla Museum. Of course it also helps to have the other 400,000 documents, 40 trunk's, 30 bundles, a safe and a multi-decade resistance box you were able to crack, which John G Trump admitting reviewed in Tesla's NY storage unit and also have seen the two pictures of everything the FBI said they took. Sava Kosanovich told the FBI under oath that the 200 page notebook Tesla was writing, was also missing. You must have snatched that too! Even beyond that, you must have gotten access to Einstein's brain held in (according to Tesla, non destructive) cryogenic freezing at CERN. And of course you are aware that Tesla has the earliest patent for superconductivity "Means for increasing electrical intensity oscillations using cold temperature" in 1900. As you know, CERN gets it's superconductive gasses like Krypton using a Westinghouse Nuclear Power Plant or Tesla's Electrical method using his 1897 Patent and Apparatus for producing Ozone and other gasses. The point being, with Einstein's brain you can figure out Nuclear Power and the Nuclear Bomb Hoax, since, according to UN and US law, Nuclear is considered "classified on birth". It's a benefit if you can speak and write 13 languages, because his Serbian handwriting is terrible. They should have brought you in to analyze the Tesla papers, instead of the FBI bringing in Deforest. In fact, you must have written the entire un-redacted FBI File and the other 3 files referred to in the FBI File. Do you have the Alien skeletons too? And the real pictures of Space, not the 100% fake Photoshop pictures NASA puts out. Only "Space Raven" knows for sure. To his credit, Tesla invented Photoshop in 1899 with his composite picture of him sitting there inside his Colorado Springs Lab. Either way, the Tyrannasaur bone, rock, fossil fuel tooth looking thing you have might catch $10M on eBay. The 800,000 documents, newspapers, articles, Library of Congress and 900 patents and Inventions at the Tesla Museum; much available online to find in 5 seconds is "made up"? You must have also worked for the 13 companies Doctor Tesla owned, have his 600 missing patents and Inventions (900 FBI File) and read the 400,000 documents locked up at the Tesla Museum. You also must have worked at the Tesla society in 1915 during WW1, worked at his Museum that was bombed in WW2 and the one that Bill Clinton bombed in 1999. It must have been a miracle that you survived the 10,000 tons of depleted Uranium NATO dropped on Serbia. Was it you that compiled the Colorado Springs Experiments Notes in 1955, from events that took place in 1899, or is it 1889 according to Tesla at his Wardenclyffe appeal. You must be sure "he had it all in his head". Of course it also helps to have the other 400,000 documents, 40 trunk's, 30 bundles, a safe and a multi-decade resistance box you were able to impossibly crack. Instead it was people who called themselves "government officials" and John G Trump who admitted reviewing the information in Tesla's NY storage unit. While you were there, you must have seen the two pictures of everything the FBI said they took. Sava Kosanovich told the FBI under oath that the 200 page notebook Tesla was writing, was also missing. You must have snatched that too! Even beyond that, you must have gotten access to Einstein's brain held in (according to Tesla, non destructive) cryogenic freezing at CERN. And of course you are aware that Tesla has the earliest patent for superconductivity "Means for increasing electrical intensity using cold temperature" in 1900. As you know, CERN gets its superconductive gasses like Krypton using a Westinghouse Nuclear Power Plant or Tesla's Electrical method using his 1897 Patent and Apparatus for producing Ozone and other gasses. The point being, with Einstein's brain you can figure out Nuclear Power and the Nuclear Bomb Hoax, since, according to UN and US law, Nuclear is considered "classified on birth". It's a benefit if you can speak and write 13 languages, because his Serbian handwriting is terrible. They should have brought you in to analyze the Tesla papers, instead of the FBI bringing in Deforest. If you were right there like his Assistants Marconi, Hammond, Kolman Tzito Father and Son, Lowenstein, Scherff, Hettinger or agents Spanel & Fitzgerald, you might have seen it all. Were you the get away driver in the movie "Fragments from Olympus" that tells the story of real-life FBI agents P. E Foxworth and Dennis Haberfeld, who died on January 15, 1943 during the posthumous investigation of Nikola Tesla's property. Described by FBI documents as being part of "a secret mission of critical importance", the two were killed on their way to General Eisenhower, when their military transport mysteriously crashed? The cause of the crash was never ascertained. It must have been the faulty Autonomous driving technology that crashed the 2 truck loads of Tesla's effects. Like other great minds study scientists before them, it's also great that you have the 1000 points of lights, tubes that Tesla said he had in a separate room on the Wardenclyffe property, under oath of his 1922 Supreme Court foreclosure appeals case, and that "each light described a scientific discovery". We're all glad you have that, because, it's been missing since 1943. Since Fitzgerald told the FBI director in 1945 that because the Russians had access to the "Entire Tesla Collection" behind the Iron Curtain, and because of experiments going on at Hill AFB, that he was soliciting Army Intelligence and "Wealthy Backers" like the Ford Foundation, to accumulate all they can on Tesla's effects and turn them into "Idea Factories". You being a double-agent for the Army and the Air Force, and a Russian agent would be the coup de gras; you might even get to work for Alex Jones at Infowars. If you could return those audio recordings of Tesla's real voice and videos of the real person, since they are also ALL missing, that would be great. If you could just fallaciously go back in time like Einstein said, then you could have asked Tesla's financier in Radio, Peck, his financiers John Astor & JP Morgan, his last co-designer in Wardenclyffe, the famous Stanford White, friend witness and politician Mark Twain, or even President William McKinley who was shot immediately after touring the Westinghouse, Tesla Hydro-electric plant at Niagara Falls; what they knew about Wireless Power and the Death Ray, because they were all assassinated. Within the same year, Nikola Tesla told JP Morgan that the Niagara electric company already approved Tesla using 10,000 horsepower from the Niagara Falls generators for wireless power. Tesla even offered the electric company stock in his company. Tesla told Morgan that he, Tesla, had secured all worldwide rights to his and the only practical method to generate, "Trillions" of simultaneous, secure, pulse-width and pulse-position modulated (Terrestrial GPS) radio signals. By March 8th 1907, prior to the 1907 stock market crash that bankrupt Westinghouse & Tesla, Tesla secured "all" patents on what he calls "Tuned Lightning", the processes, appliances, generation, transmission, transformation, distribution, direction, storage, regulation, control and economic utilization. Two months later the patent office accepted his refiling of his patent for the Wardenclyffe Tower Structure, but did not approve it until 1914. This delay gave time for the Federal Reserve Act to be passed to create a Fiat money system, and when WW1 started, the supposed entire world attacked Tesla's hometown, Serbia. But, you knew all that! Granted, a few years earlier, Tesla did tell JP Morgan that if he did not provide the next $250,000 or more to finish Wardenclyffe that you, JP Morgan would "Never see that machinery". Since Tesla mentioned to Morgan that he, Tesla, was responsible for more than $6 Trillion in sales to industry based on his inventions, that this venture would work as sure as "my name is Tesla". But later in Tesla's 1919 Autobiography in Electrical Experimenter, he wanted to dispell a rumor in the press about the destruction of his tower, Wardenclyffe, he said "They were building more of them". In the same Autobiography he states "every one of my Inventions prior to 1919 worked 100% as he prescribed". Days after Tesla dies, Spanel tells the FBI that Fitzgerald told him that Tesla had "completed and perfected" wireless power transmission and that the main goal of Tesla's latest works was to provide electricity to the world absolutely for free. Is Tesla lying? If you think so, prove it up! (Now you're looking for the secret, but you won't find it, because of course, you're not really looking, you don't want to work it out, ... You want to be Fooled! -- Ending sequence in The Prestige) <https://youtu.be/GZc3EsElqeA>

Response to commenters who claim "They know everything about "Nikola Tesla", then go on to claim they can "debunk" Tesla. Even though it's unlikely they know how to spell his name. Tesla Leaks has sourced the documents and admission by Tesla and the Library of Congress in 1891, his name is spelt with a (C) "Nicola Tesla". <http://www.teslaleaks.com/> -- Some think that everything online about Tesla, is made up! Voted the most Awesome, Epic Retort in Internet history with a call to shut-down the rest of the Internet! Response to those who claim "They know everything about "Nikola Tesla"", then claim they can "debunk" Tesla. To begin with, it's unlikely they know how to spell his name or where he is from, since the town he was born in doesn't exist anymore. Tesla Leaks has found the admission by Tesla, the Library of Congress in 1891 and prior to 1897, his name is spelt with a (C) "Nicola Tesla". Tesla Leaks - Missing Patents & Inventions found under the name spelt "Nicola Tesla" <http://www.teslaleaks.com/> -- <https://nikolateslasolar.blogspot.com/2017/01/tesla-leaks-nicola-tesla-missing.html> -- Some think that everything online about Tesla, is made up! Much of it is! But, how could you know "everything"? Have you read all the top secret documents in every country on Earth? You must work for the CIA! Either way, the Tyrannasaur bone, rock, fossil fuel tooth looking thing you have might catch $10M on eBay. The 800,000 documents, newspapers, articles, Library of Congress and 900 patents and Inventions at the Tesla Museum; much available online to find in 5 seconds is "made up"? You must have also worked for the 13 companies Doctor Tesla owned, have his 600 missing patents and Inventions (900 FBI File) and read the 400,000 documents locked up at the Tesla

Museum. You also must have worked at the Tesla society in 1915 during WW1, worked at his Museum that was bombed in WW2 and worked at the one that Bill Clinton bombed in 1999. It must have been a miracle that you survived the 10,000 tons of depleted Uranium NATO dropped on Serbia. Was it you that compiled the Colorado Springs Experiments Notes in 1955, published in 1978, from events that took place in 1899, or is it 1889 according to Tesla at his Wardenclyffe appeal case. You must be sure "he had it all in his head". Of course it also helps to have the other 400,000 documents, 40 trunk's, 30 bundles, a safe and a multi-decade resistance box you were able to impossibly crack. Instead it was people who called themselves "government officials" and John G Trump who admitted reviewing the information in Tesla's NY storage unit. While you were there, you must have seen the two pictures of everything the FBI said they took. Sava Kosanovich told the FBI under oath that the 200 page notebook Tesla was writing before his death (hoax), was also missing. You must have snatched that too! Even beyond that, you must have gotten access to Einstein's brain held in (according to Tesla, non destructive) cryogenic freezing at CERN. And of course you are aware that Tesla has the earliest patent for superconductivity "Means for increasing electrical intensity using cold temperature" in 1900. As you know, CERN gets it's superconductive gasses like Krypton using a Westinghouse Nuclear Power Plant or Tesla's Electrical method using his 1897 Patent and Apparatus for producing Ozone and other gasses. It's a benefit if you can speak and write 13 languages, because his Serbian handwriting is terrible. They should have brought you in to analyze the Tesla papers, instead of the FBI bringing in Deforest. If you we're right there like his Assistants Marconi, Hammond, Kolman Tzito Father and Son, Lowenstein, Scherff, Hettinger or agents Spanel & Fitzgerald, you might have seen it all. Were you the get away driver in the movie "Fragments from Olympus" that tells the story of real-life FBI agents P. E Foxworth and Dennis Haberfeld, who died on January 15, 1943 during the posthumus investigation of Nikola Tesla's property? The mission described by FBI documents as being part of "a secret mission of critical importance"; the two were killed on their way to General Eisenhower when their military transport mysteriously crashed. The cause of the crash was never ascertained. It must have been the faulty Autonomous driving technology that crashed the 2 truck loads of Tesla's effects. Like other great minds study scientists before them, it's also great that you have the 1000 points of lights and tubes that Tesla said he had in a separate room on the Wardenclyffe property up until 1907, under oath in his 1922 Supreme Court foreclosure appeals case. Each light he said "described a unique scientific discovery". We're all glad you have that, because, it's been missing since mentioned in the Wardenclyffe appeal. Since Fitzgerald told the FBI director in 1945 that because the Russians had access to the "Entire Tesla Collection" behind the Iron Curtain, and because of experiments going on at Hill AFB, that he was soliciting Army Intelligence and "Wealthy Backers" like the Ford Foundation, to accumulate all they can on Tesla's effects and turn them into "Idea Factories". You being a double-agent for the Army and the Air Force, and a Russian agent would be the coup de gras; you might even get to work for Alex Jones at Infowars. If you could return those audio recordings of Tesla's real voice and videos of the real person, since they are also ALL missing, that would be great. If you could just fallaciously go back in time like Einstein said, then you could have asked Tesla's financier in Radio, Peck, his financiers John Astor & JP Morgan, his last co-designer in Wardenclyffe, the famous Stanford White, friend witness and politician Mark Twain, or even President William McKinley who was shot immediately after touring the Westinghouse, Tesla Hydro-electric plant at Niagara Falls; what they knew about Wireless Power and the Death Ray, because they were all assassinated. Within the same year, Nikola Tesla told JP Morgan that the Niagara electric company already approved Tesla using 10,000 horsepower from the Niagara Falls generators for wireless power. Tesla even offered the electric company stock in his company. Tesla told Morgan that he, Tesla, had secured all worldwide rights to his and the only practical method to generate, "Trillions" of simultaneous, secure, pulse-width and pulse-position modulated (Terrestrial GPS) radio signals. By March 8th 1907, prior to the 1907 stock market crash that bankrupt Westinghouse & Tesla, Tesla secured "all" patents on what he calls "Tuned Lightening", the processes, appliances, generation, transmission, transformation, distribution, direction, storage, regulation, control and economic utilization. Two months later after the stock market crash in 1907, the patent office accepted his refiling of his patent for the Wardenclyffe Tower Structure, but did not approve the patent until 1914. This delay gave time for the Federal Reserve Act to be passed to create a Fiat money system, and when WW1 started. Then, in WW1, the supposed entire world attacked Tesla's hometown, Serbia. But, you knew all that! Granted, a few years earlier, Tesla did tell JP Morgan that if he did not provide the next $250,000 or more to finish Wardenclyffe that you, JP Morgan would "Never see that machinery" (the final pieces that included the high tension UV generator to be placed in the Wardenclyffe Tower Cupola and Spark-Gap controls within the Tower structure). Since Tesla mentioned to Morgan that he, Tesla, was responsible for more than $6 Trillion in sales to industry based on his inventions, that this venture would work as sure as "my name is Tesla". But later in Tesla's 1919 Autobiography in Electrical Experimenter, he wanted to dispell a rumor in the press about the destruction of his tower, Wardenclyffe, he said "They were building more of them". In the same Autobiography he states "every one of my Inventions prior to 1919 worked 100% as he prescribed". Fortunately, in Tesla's last publication in the 1920 Electrical Experimenter, Tesla gives credit to John Hays Hammond for his June 22nd 1917 patent which he says "makes wireleses power possible". Days after Tesla dies, in a letter to the FBI director, Tesla tells Fitzgerald that his experiments in conjunction to the transmission of electrical power had been "completed and perfected" wireless power transmission and that the main goal of Tesla's latest works was to provide electricity to the world absolutely for free. Is Tesla lying? If you think so, prove it up! (Now you're looking for the secret, but you won't find it, because of course, you're not really looking, you don't want to work it out, ... You want to be Fooled! -- Ending sequence in The Prestige) <https://youtu.be/GZc3EsElqeA>

How do you know? You've read all the top secret documents in every country on Earth, you must work for the FBI. In fact, you must have written the entire un-redacted FBI File and the other 3 files referred to in the FBI File. Do you have the Alien skeletons too? And the real pictures of Space, not the 100% fake Photoshop pictures NASA puts out. The Tyrannasaur bone, rock tooth you have might catch $10M on eBay.

George Herbert Walker Scherff Jr, son of Tesla's Attorney for 30 years, GHW Scherff Sr. allegedly named (Curious George) is in the FBI File. Scherff disappears and reappears as "Bush". Barbara Bush is also a Pierce from the famous Tesla Pierce-Arrow car. The plans for Teleforce were allegedly in a safe deposit box at the Governor Clinton Hotel. The FBI File reports that the FBI was looking into the basements of other NY/Chicago hotels for possible documents or inventions. There is no reports about what they found. One such hotel is the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, where Tesla lived at the time, which was turned into the Empire State Building in 1929.

One theory is that Tesla used his Mechanical Reciprocating Engine (Earthquake Machine) to easily and cheaply demolish the Astor hotel to make way for the Empire State Building. <https://youtube.com/watch?v=V69INjJBMBY>

Missing from Tesla's effects are the 1000 Lights & Tubes each representing a discovery in science (1000 points of light, Curious George HWB) Tesla also states his Colorado Springs Experiment was in 1889 not 1899.

'It's a no-brainer': are (250 MPG) hydrogen cars the future? The fuel cell is supplemented by a bank of supercapacitors – extremely fast-charging batteries – that supply four wheel-mounted electric motors with additional power for acceleration. An innovative regenerative braking system captures most of the energy wasted during braking, putting it back into the supercapacitors. When combined with the fuel cell, Spowers says, that lets the Rasa achieve the equivalent of more than 250 miles per gallon.

If you believe in Dinosaurs, you believe in Banning free energy, free water, Hydro-electric dams that get paid off, and can last for "1000's of years" "You can burn all the coal, gas and trees in the world, but Niagara Falls will last Forever" - Nikola Tesla, April 1896 -- However, the USBR faced opposition when it proposed the Echo Park Dam in Utah's Dinosaur National Monument, which the nascent environmental movement saw as a legal threat to the status of protected lands.[8] (A Dinosaur rock tooth)

#ioncraft Repost on Wireless Powered, Remote Controlled, Phone Tapping "Ioncraft" Patent, 1959 - Such Ioncraft may serve as platforms which would be stationed above the earth for long periods of time and serve other purposes as will be explained below. The output power from microwave generators, such as magnetrons, coupled with high power capacity amplifier tubes may be beamed to the Ioncraft while airborne or the craft may carry its own power supply. Horizontal movement of the craft may be effected by the principles set forth in Serial No. 760,390 of Glenn E. I-lagen filed September 11, 1958, by tilting the craft downwardly in the forward direction whereby the ionic propulsion force provides a horizontal force component to cause the craft to move in a horizontal direction. Tilting of the craft may easily be effected through variation of the voltage between emitting electrodes 12 and collecting grid electrode 14. For example, by electrically separating the craft into four sections of substantially equal size as illustrated in FIGURE 15 (Sheet 6), the voltage applied to two of the adjacent sections can be reduced by adding resistance in series with the current path and this will cause the lift produced by these two sections to decrease relative to the lift produced by the two other sections. Thus, horizontal movement of the craft may easily be controlled from the ground station. The position of the craft in air may be remotely controlled from a ground station through wireless control systems which may be of any suitable known type. The horizontal position of the craft may also be controlled automatically.

For example, the position of the craft of the present invention may be automatically controlled in space through means of suitable centering or tracking apparatus operating on well known principles, such for example as are disclosed in US. Patent Nos. 2,513,367 to Scott or 2,604,601 to Menzel. In such tracking apparatus, one form of which is diagrammatically illustrated in FIG- URE 15 (Sheet 6), a beam of electromagnetic energy, such as light or infrared, is centered on a suitable photocell 128 which generates control signals that are used to control variable impedances to reduce the voltage applied to various sections of the craft to thereby control the position of the craft in accordance with the position of the beam source at the ground station. It is also contemplated that this craft may be supplied with electrical power transmitted to the Ioncraft while in flight by microwaves. It has been demonstrated 80% of the energy emitted from a ground station microwave antenna array can be collected in the form of heat by airborne vehicles. In this case, such heat may be readily converted into high voltage by conventional means such as turbines operating high voltage generators, suitable thermocouples and vibrator-transformer convertors or the like. The use of high power microwave amplifiers, such as Amplitrons (Raytheon Co.), for power transmission via microwaves can provide the requisite power for a craft of this type. Therefore, it may be not essential that a self contained power unit be carried by the craft for special uses.

Jan 18 2018 Europe to reach off-grid energy parity up to 20 years ahead of the US. It is estimated that it will cost the same to self-generate and store power as it will to buy from an energy provider by 2022 in Europe and as soon as 2021 in Oceania, according to new research conducted by EY and a leading global analyst house. The data also indicates that electric vehicles (EVs) will reach cost and performance parity with traditional combustion engine vehicles across all markets by 2025.

Electrons get created and absorbed by the Ether, like an electrical, reciprocating pump, in a tuned nodal "system", where Resistance is reduced to Zero, turning into Negative Resistance (Resonant Rise?). And back again. It's like turning the whole Earth into an A/C, Impulse DC, Dynamo, akin to his "perfectly efficient" A/C Induction Motor. It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true. By one bold stroke an English genius, Mr. John Hettinger, has unthinkingly opened up the way for its realization. Like numerous other inventions, the way lay before our very eyes, but we were all too bling to see it. While working on a means for transmitting radio waves without material aerials, MR. Hettinger hit upon the idea of using ionized light beams as elevated conductors. Obviously simple when one thinks of it.

Reply to Discovery Channel trolls making false claims that Tesla is being given or taken false credit for other scientists: Nikola Tesla is given full credit by the Patent Office/s for the "perfectly efficient" A/C Induction Motor (Ford's reluctance engine), the Mono-polar DC Dynamo in the Prius, and all Internal Combustion Engines are Nikola Tesla's Aug. 1893 Patent for a perfectly efficient, floating piston, "Reciprocating Engine" for gasses or fluids ... The Patent Office/s, referring patent holders and the Patent Office "common classifications" give him credit. In the Tesla patents he rarely refers to others patents, but does refer to his own earlier or simultaneous patents. Plus, the Patent Office didn't require him to refer to other scientists works. However, he does refer to some scientists, mostly in electro-magnetism and radio, natural phenomena and mathematics. For example, Tesla refers to Benjamin Franklin in his "Lightning Protection" patent as to how Tesla's system is the opposite of Franklin's Rod. Tesla Leaks busted Diesel-gate the weekend it went public, but was known since the Diesel patent of 1894-5:

From a Nikola Tesla BBC documentary: "The Life and times of Nikola Tesla" (removed from YouTube) the townspeople of Colorado Springs, 22 miles away from Tesla's Colorado Lab, they soon felt the effects of Tesla's apparatus, sparks lept from the ground, singing their feet through their shoes, metal objects near fire hydrants would draw lighting bolts several inches away. These were the side effects of adjusting the Magnifying Transmitter in perfect resonance with Earth. Late one night in 1899, Tesla fired up his machine at full blast, in order to create his phenomenon called "Resonant Rise", Tesla was sending out a series of pulses, resulting in a tremendous cumulative effect. At Ground Zero, the Resonant Rise manifested in man made 130' foot long artificial Lighting. Thunder was heard 22 miles away. Tesla believed the potential was limitless." From a Nikola Tesla BBC documentary: "The Life and times of Nikola Tesla" (removed from YouTube) the townspeople of Colorado Springs, 22 miles away from Tesla's Colorado Lab, they soon felt the effects of Tesla's apparatus, sparks lept from the ground, singing their feet through their shoes, metal objects near fire hydrants would draw lighting bolts several inches away. These were the side effects of adjusting the Magnifying Transmitter in perfect resonance with Earth. Late one night in 1899, Tesla fired up his machine at full blast, in order to create his phenomenon called "Resonant Rise", Tesla was sending out a series of pulses, resulting in a tremendous cumulative effect. At Ground Zero, the Resonant Rise manifested in man made 130' foot long artificial Lighting. Thunder was heard 22 miles away. Tesla believed the potential was limitless." Hydrazine vapor flowed through a quartz tube 13 mm in which a microwave discharge was excited with an open-reflector antenna powered by a Raytheon 2450 MHz 100-watt therapy unit. The discharge was initiated by a (Tesla coil) at a fairly low pressure of hydrazine, giving a hot, intense blue-white discharge which yielded no di-imide. Hydrazine pressure was then increased to the point just before the discharge went out -10 Torr, giving a blueish barely visible discharge with a yellowish core which generated optimum amounts of di-imide. The open-reflector antenna produced more di-imide than did a closed, tuned cavity with better coupling and a more intense discharge. A constriction in the quartz tube just below the discharge improved yields, probably by permitting a higher hydrazine pressure for a given flow rate. Although an apparently feeble, rather cool discharge gave the most di-imide, the yield was nevertheless roughly proportional to the power output of the microwave generator, which was usually set at 100%. 1973 <http://nrcresearchpress.com/doi/pdf/10.1139/v73-536> Hydrazene Wikipedia <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hydrazine> Hydrazine Rocket Fuel <https://youtube.com/watch?v=5UFTfwTxeEk> 1908 THE ELECTROCHEMICAL OXIDATION OF SOME HYDRAZINE SALTS http://pubs.acs.org/doi/abs/10.1021/ja02202a009? <http://nepis.epa.gov/Exe/ZyPURL.cgi?Dockey=9101A7YW.TXT> -- The Hydrazine flame's temperature is between 400 and 5000 degrees Celsius http://deadspace.wikia.com/wiki/PFM-100\_Hydrazine\_Torch\_Flamethrower (even without catalytic agents like Ozone or Nitrous injection) 1912 <https://books.google.com/books?id=z5UhAQAAMAAJ> -- Safety and Handling of Hydrazine <http://dtic.mil/dtic/tr/fulltext/u2/p005339.pdf> 1962 and isomerization in the system AlCl<sub>3</sub> (solid)-hexachlorocyclohexane at .... #internet #of #energy #wireless Jan. 4th 2018 Internet of Energy can cut power transmission losses: Nobel laureate. The Japanese scientist describes it as 'energy, anytime and anywhere', and an important feature of this is wireless power transmission. Amano says that transmission losses can be reduced to zero using laser light. The technology, when implemented could be a major boon for India that suffers from massive transmission losses — as high as 20-50 per cent in some states. Amano says Japanese scientists have achieved about 40 per cent efficiency in wireless transmission of power through a microwave band. However, power can be transmitted only up to a distance of 100 metres, and the scientists are working on increasing the efficiency levels to 80 per cent. Since microwave bands are not suitable for long-distance transmission, scientists are now experimenting with laser technology, where power is beamed from one point to another. Amano says that transmission losses can be reduced to zero using this method. However, a lot of work remains to be done as the current efficiency on the receiving side is just 20 per cent.

Recent developments tend to fulfill the old, old dream of power transmission without wires. For years men have labored in vain to transmit power without wires and thus solve a myriad of transportation problems, such as propelling vehicles, ships, trains, aircraft, etc., without having to include a source of power in their construction. It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true.

By one bold stroke an English genius, Mr. John Hettinger, has unthinkingly opened up the way for its realization. Like numerous other inventions, the way lay before our very eyes, but we were all too blind to see it.

While working on a means for transmitting radio waves without material aerials, MR. Hettinger hit upon the idea of using ionized light beams as elevated conductors. Obviously simple when one thinks of it.

Recent developments tend to fulfill the old, old dream of power transmission without wires. For years men have labored in vain to transmit power without wires and thus solve a myriad of transportation problems, such as a propelling vehicles, ships, trains, aircraft, etc., without having to include a source of power in their construction. It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true.

by Thomas W. Benson for Electrical Experimenter, March 1920

Recent developments tend to fulfill the old, old dream of power transmission without wires. For years men have labored in vain to transmit power without wires and thus solve a myriad of transportation problems, such as a propelling vehicles, ships, trains, aircraft, etc., without having to include a source of power in their construction. It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true.

By one bold stroke an English genius, Mr. John Hettinger, has unthinkingly opened up the way for its realization. Like numerous other inventions, the way lay before our very eyes, but we were all too blind to see it.

While working on a means for transmitting radio waves without material aerials, MR. Hettinger hit upon the idea of using ionized light beams as elevated conductors. Obviously simple when one thinks of it.

It is a well-known fact that an ionized gas is a conductor; in fact, the conductivity of a gas is a measure of its ionization. Furthermore, it is possible to ionize a gas by means of a stream of ultra violet rays. Working with these facts, Mr. Hettinger devised means to utilize them for radio transmission in the following manner.

As shown in Fig. 1, a source of ultra violet rays, an arc or mercury vapor lamp. A. is arranged to throw a beam of ionizing rays vertically.

These rays result in an ionized stream of air that acts as a conductor, the surrounding un-ionized air being practically a perfect insulator. By making connection to this conducting beam with a metallic screen or mesh at B, it can be utilized as an aerial for radio communication.

We are perfectly aware that this ionized beam rapidly loses its conducting power as the distance from the source increases, therefore the effective height of such an arrangement is determined by the intensity of the ray generator. So much for the idea as applied to radio communication.

But let us consider further. In studying the spectrum we find that the sunlight on reaching the earth contains few ultra violet rays of shorter wavelengths than 3.000 Angstrom units, yet we are able to generate much shorter rays with an arc light. It is unreasonable to assume that shorter waves do not leave the sun, and in view of the fact that it has been determined that the upper stratum of our atmosphere is ionized, it is accepted that the shorter rays are absorbed to cause this ionization.

It will now be apparent that a very good condition exists for the transmission of energy without wires. As shown in Fig. 2, we have the earth, a good conductor, surrounded with a blanket of insulating air about ten miles thick, beyond which, up to about a hundred miles, the air is highly rarefied and kept in a state of ionization by light from the sun and stars.

Hence, we have two good conductors separated by several miles of atmosphere, practically a perfect insulator, an ideal arrangement for our purposes. We have but to connect a source of current to the earth and to the ionized strata of air and energy can be transmitted entirely around the earth without wires. The energy could be utilized in any part of the earth by merely connecting to the pair of conductors.

This condition has been recognized for some time, but the difficulty lies in making connections to the upper layer of conducting atmosphere. It is hardly practical to construct towers six or seven miles high for the purpose, then again the energy could not be utilized without using a similar structure at the point of reception, which makes this scheme hardly feasible for aircraft or moving vehicles.

Return then to the ionized stream for radio aerials. We can easily construct arcs that will throw a beam ten or twenty miles. Then why not make connection to that upper stratum with an ionized stream of air? Wonderful in its simplicity.

In Fig. 2 the writer attempts to portray a generating station embodying these principles. In the main building will be housed the generating units for supplying the current to the arc and the primary of the high voltage apparatus for transmission of energy. Supported on the roof of this structure will be a monstrous arc lamp capable of throwing a stream of ultra violet rays for at least ten miles. In this beam is supported a conducting screen to make connection to the conducting stream of ionized air. The insulation of these parts present no great difficulties to modern engineering.

The building will also house a huge step-up transformer, a set of high voltage condensers, a spark gap either of the rotary or quenched type and a huge oscillation transformer or Tesla coil. These instruments are connected in the usual manner and tuned so that the inductance in the circuit and the capacity formed by the earth and ionized upper strata will have a well defined oscillation period.

By these means the whole earth will become an electrified body, energy to be drawn at any point by simply making metallic connection to the earth and pointing a beam of light vertically, a screen being used to take the energy that will flow down the beam. An inductance coil being necessary in the circuit to insure resonance with the transmitter at the receiving set. After once started, the receiving energy can be used to keep the arc going.

Ships will have an arc and reflector mounted on the masts, airplanes have two arcs, one on top, the other below, and so on.

This scheme will not interfere with present short range transmission, it being hardly practical for each home to have an arc on the roof when one arc would serve for a town and several for a large city.

Rather its benefit will lie in the utilization of water falls far from civilization, now unused on account of difficulties in transmitting the power hundreds or thousands of miles.

Aside from the transmission of power other advantages may accrue. Will such a stress between the earth and upper air strata reduce the presence of dust particles in the atmosphere? Or, again, cause the immediate condensation of fogs and moisture in the air to give us perfectly cloudless days? Perhaps it will become simply a matter of changing the frequency or voltage of the current to cause rain or to prevent it.

Then the question of effect on radio communication: will it make our present sets obsolete, a transmitter of the future being connected directly to the power set and acting by superimposing different frequencies on the power frequency? Or will radio-telephony work hand in hand with the power system, the voice currents being impressed on the power circuit and filtered out at the receiver?

There are thousand and one things such an arrangement might effect. Will trees and vegetation increase in growth as experiments in electrical culture would indicate? What effect would such stresses have on germs and bacilli? Their numbers will be decreased by the destructive effects of the ultra-violet light. Will man grow to an unsuspected height and become uniformly healthier due to the electrical treatment he would be constantly undergoing?

And so on – conjuncture in without bounds, but the scheme is practical to all appearances; it requires but some financial genius to give it a trial.

And to think it all was within reach such a short time ago! Had Tesla but put a gigantic arc on top of the tower of his experimental station in Long Island accurate data would be at hand now – were it but even a promise it would mean another step towards the final mastery of all matter by man.

Recent developments tend to fulfill the old, old dream of power transmission without wires. For years men have labored in vain to transmit power without wires and thus solve a myriad of transportation problems, such as propelling vehicles, ships, trains, aircraft, etc., without having to include a source of power in their construction. It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true.

By one bold stroke an English genius, Mr. John Hettinger, has unthinkingly opened up the way for its realization. Like numerous other inventions, the way lay before our very eyes, but we were all too blind to see it.

While working on a means for transmitting radio waves without material aerials, MR. Hettinger hit upon the idea of using ionized light beams as elevated conductors. Obviously simple when one thinks of it.

It is a well-known fact that an ionized gas is a conductor; in fact, the conductivity of a gas is a measure of its ionization. Furthermore, it is possible to ionize a gas by means of a stream of ultra violet rays. Working with these facts, Mr. Hettinger devised means to utilize them for radio transmission in the following manner.

As shown in Fig. 1, a source of ultra violet rays, an arc or mercury vapor lamp. A. is arranged to throw a beam of ionizing rays vertically.

These rays result in an ionized stream of air that acts as a conductor, the surrounding un-ionized air being practically a perfect insulator. By making connection to this conducting beam with a metallic screen or mesh at B, it can be utilized as an aerial for radio communication.

We are perfectly aware that this ionized beam rapidly loses its conducting power as the distance from the source increases, therefore the effective height of such an arrangement is determined by the intensity of the ray generator. So much for the idea as applied to radio communication.

For years men have labored in vain to transmit power without wires and thus solve a myriad of transportation problems, such as propelling vehicles, ships, trains, aircraft, etc., without having to include a source of power in their construction. It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true.

By one bold stroke an English genius, Mr. John Hettinger, has unthinkingly opened up the way for its realization. Like numerous other inventions, the way lay before our very eyes, but we were all too blind to see it.

While working on a means for transmitting radio waves without material aerials, MR. Hettinger hit upon the idea of using ionized light beams as elevated conductors. Obviously simple when one thinks of it.

It is a well-known fact that an ionized gas is a conductor; in fact, the conductivity of a gas is a measure of its ionization. Furthermore, it is possible to ionize a gas by means of a stream of ultra violet rays. Working with these facts, Mr. Hettinger devised means to utilize them for radio transmission in the following manner.

As shown in Fig. 1, a source of ultra violet rays, an arc or mercury vapor lamp. A. is arranged to throw a beam of ionizing rays vertically.

These rays result in an ionized stream of air that acts as a conductor, the surrounding un-ionized air being practically a perfect insulator. By making connection to this conducting beam with a metallic screen or mesh at B, it can be utilized as an aerial for radio communication.

We are perfectly aware that this ionized beam rapidly loses its conducting power as the distance from the source increases, therefore the effective height of such an arrangement is determined by the intensity of the ray generator. So much for the idea as applied to radio communication.

But let us consider further. In studying the spectrum we find that the sunlight on reaching the earth contains few ultra violet rays of shorter wavelengths than 3,000 Angstrom units, yet we are able to generate much shorter rays with an arc light. It is unreasonable to assume that shorter waves do not leave the sun, and in view of the fact that it has been determined that the upper stratum of our atmosphere is ionized, it is accepted that the shorter rays are absorbed to cause this ionization.

It will now be apparent that a very good condition exists for the transmission of energy without wires. As shown in Fig. 2, we have the earth, a good conductor, surrounded with a blanket of insulating air about ten miles thick, beyond which, up to about a hundred miles, the air is highly rarefied and kept in a state of ionization by light from the sun and stars.

Hence, we have two good conductors separated by several miles of atmosphere, practically a perfect insulator, an ideal arrangement for our purposes. We have but to connect a source of current to the earth and to the ionized strata of air and energy can be transmitted entirely around the earth without wires. The energy could be utilized in any part of the earth by merely connecting to the pair of conductors.

This condition has been recognized for some time, but the difficulty lies in making connections to the upper layer of conducting atmosphere. It is hardly practical to construct towers six or seven miles high for the purpose, then again the energy could not be utilized without using a similar structure at the point of reception, which makes this scheme hardly feasible for aircraft or moving vehicles.

Return then to the ionized stream for radio aerals. We can easily construct arcs that will throw a beam ten or twenty miles. Then why not make connection to that upper stratum with an ionized stream of air? Wonderful in its simplicity.

In Fig. 2 the writer attempts to portray a generating station embodying these principles. In the main building will be housed the generating units for supplying the current to the arc and the primary of the high voltage apparatus for transmission of energy. Supported on the roof of this structure will be a monstrous arc lamp capable of throwing a stream of ultra violet rays for at least ten miles. In this beam is supported a conducting screen to make connection to the conducting stream of ionized air. The insulation of these parts present no great difficulties to modern engineering.

The building will also house a huge step-up transformer, a set of high voltage condensers, a spark gap either of the rotary or quenched type and a huge oscillation transformer or Tesla coil. These instruments are connected in the usual manner and tuned so that the inductance in the circuit and the capacity formed by the earth and ionized upper strata will have a well defined oscillation period.

By these means the whole earth will become an electrified body, energy to be drawn at any point by simply making metallic connection to the earth and pointing a beam of light vertically, a screen being used to take the energy that will flow down the beam. An inductance coil being necessary in the circuit to insure resonance with the transmitter at the receiving set. After once started, the receiving energy can be used to keep the arc going.

Ships will have an arc and reflector mounted on the masts, airplanes have two arcs, one on top, the other below, and so on.

This scheme will not interfere with present short range transmission, it being hardly practical for each home to have an arc on the roof when one arc would serve for a town and several for a large city.

Rather its benefit will lie in the utilization of water falls far from civilization, now unused on account of difficulties in transmitting the power hundreds or thousands of miles.

Aside from the transmission of power other advantages may accrue. Will such a stress between the earth and upper air strata reduce the presence of dust particles in the atmosphere? Or, again, cause the immediate condensation of fogs and moisture in the air to give us perfectly cloudless days? Perhaps it will become simply a matter of changing the frequency or voltage of the current to cause rain or to prevent it.

Then the question of effect on radio communication: will it make our present sets obsolete, a transmitter of the future being connected directly to the power set and acting by superimposing different frequencies on the power frequency? Or will radio-telephony work hand in hand with the power system, the voice currents being impressed on the power circuit and filtered out at the receiver?

There are thousand and one things such an arrangement might effect. Will trees and vegetation increase in growth as experiments in electrical culture would indicate? What effect would such stresses have on germs and bacilli? Their numbers will be decreased by the destructive effects of the ultra-violet light. Will man grow to an unsuspected height and become uniformly healthier due to the electrical treatment he would be constantly undergoing?

And so on – conjuncture in without bounds, but the scheme is practical to all appearances; it requires but some financial genius to give it a trial.

And to think it all was within reach such a short time ago! Had Tesla but put a gigantic arc on top of the tower of his experimental station in Long Island accurate data would be at hand now – were it but even a promise it would mean another step towards the final mastery of all matter by man.

It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true.

By one bold stroke an English genius, Mr. John Hettinger, has unthinkingly opened up the way for its realization. Like numerous other inventions, the way lay before our very eyes, but we were all too blind to see it.

While working on a means for transmitting radio waves without material aerials, MR. Hettinger hit upon the idea of using ionized light beams as elevated conductors. Obviously simple when one thinks of it.

It is a well-known fact that an ionized gas is a conductor; in fact, the conductivity of a gas is a measure of its ionization. Furthermore, it is possible to ionize a gas by means of a stream of ultra violet rays. Working with these facts, Mr. Hettinger devised means to utilize them for radio transmission in the following manner.

As shown in Fig. 1, a source of ultra violet rays, an arc or mercury vapor lamp. A. is arranged to throw a beam of ionizing rays vertically.

These rays result in an ionized stream of air that acts as a conductor, the surrounding un-ionized air being practically a perfect insulator. By making connection to this conducting beam with a metallic screen or mesh at B, it can be utilized as an aerial for radio communication.

We are perfectly aware that this ionized beam rapidly loses its conducting power as the distance from the source increases, therefore the effective height of such an arrangement is determined by the intensity of the ray generator. So much for the idea as applied to radio communication.

But let us consider further. In studying the spectrum we find that the sunlight on reaching the earth contains few ultra violet rays of shorter wavelengths than 3,000 Angstrom units, yet we are able to generate much shorter rays with an arc light. It is unreasonable to assume that shorter waves do not leave the sun, and in view of the fact that it has been determined that the upper stratum of our atmosphere is ionized, it is accepted that the shorter rays are absorbed to cause this ionization.

It will now be apparent that a very good condition exists for the transmission of energy without wires. As shown in Fig. 2, we have the earth, a good conductor, surrounded with a blanket of insulating air about ten miles thick, beyond which, up to about a hundred miles, the air is highly rarefied and kept in a state of ionization by light from the sun and stars.

Hence, we have two good conductors separated by several miles of atmosphere, practically a perfect insulator, an ideal arrangement for our purposes. We have but to connect a source of current to the earth and to the ionized strata of air and energy can be transmitted entirely around the earth without wires. The energy could be utilized in any part of the earth by merely connecting to the pair of conductors.

This condition has been recognized for some time, but the difficulty lies in making connections to the upper layer of conducting atmosphere. It is hardly practical to construct towers six or seven miles high for the purpose, then again the energy could not be utilized without using a similar structure at the point of reception, which makes this scheme hardly feasible for aircraft or moving vehicles.

Return then to the ionized stream for radio aerials. We can easily construct arcs that will throw a beam ten or twenty miles. Then why not make connection to that upper stratum with an ionized stream of air? Wonderful in its simplicity.

In Fig. 2 the writer attempts to portray a generating station embodying these principles. In the main building will be housed the generating units for supplying the current to the arc and the primary of the high voltage apparatus for transmission of energy. Supported on the roof of this structure will be a monstrous arc lamp capable of throwing a stream of ultra violet rays for at least ten miles. In this beam is supported a conducting screen to make connection to the conducting stream of ionized air. The insulation of these parts present no great difficulties to modern engineering.

The building will also house a huge step-up transformer, a set of high voltage condensers, a spark gap either of the rotary or quenched type and a huge oscillation transformer or Tesla coil. These instruments are connected in the usual manner and tuned so that the inductance in the circuit and the capacity formed by the earth and ionized upper strata will have a well defined oscillation period.

By these means the whole earth will become an electrified body, energy to be drawn at any point by simply making metallic connection to the earth and pointing a beam of light vertically, a screen being used to take the energy that will flow down the beam. An inductance coil being necessary in the circuit to insure resonance with the transmitter at the receiving set. After once started, the receiving energy can be used to keep the arc going.

Ships will have an arc and reflector mounted on the masts, airplanes have two arcs, one on top, the other below, and so on.

This scheme will not interfere with present short range transmission, it being hardly practical for each home to have an arc on the roof when one arc would serve for a town and several for a large city.

Rather its benefit will lie in the utilization of water falls far from civilization, now unused on account of difficulties in transmitting the power hundreds or thousands of miles.

Aside from the transmission of power other advantages may accrue. Will such a stress between the earth and upper air strata reduce the presence of dust particles in the atmosphere? Or, again, cause the immediate condensation of fogs and moisture in the air to give us perfectly cloudless days? Perhaps it will become simply a matter of changing the frequency or voltage of the current to cause rain or to prevent it.

Then the question of effect on radio communication: will it make our present sets obsolete, a transmitter of the future being connected directly to the power set and acting by superimposing different frequencies on the power frequency? Or will radio-telephony work hand in hand with the power system, the voice currents being impressed on the power circuit and filtered out at the receiver?

There are thousand and one things such an arrangement might effect. Will trees and vegetation increase in growth as experiments in electrical culture would indicate? What effect would such stresses have on germs and bacilli? Their numbers will be decreased by the destructive effects of the ultra-violet light. Will man grow to an unsuspected height and become uniformly healthier due to the electrical treatment he would be constantly undergoing?

And so on – conjuncture in without bounds, but the scheme is practical to all appearances; it requires but some financial genius to give it a trial.

And to think it all was within reach such a short time ago! Had Tesla but put a gigantic arc on top of the tower of his experimental station in Long Island accurate data would be at hand now – were it but even a promise it would mean another step towards the final mastery of all matter by man.

#negative #resistance #high #tension #radiant #beams #teleforce Nikola Tesla gives credit to "John Hettinger" for realizing WIRELESS POWER. In Tesla's last article on wireless Power, Electrical Experimenter, March 1920 "Wireless Transmission of Power Now Possible", Tesla refers to "John Hettinger" patents that "opened up the way for it's realization. Tesla Leaks published the Hettinger Patent on Wireless Power 4 years ago. The Hettinger Patent confirms the concept of NEGATIVE RESISTANCE in A/C Impulse systems with Mercury/Gas bulbs at a distance by HIGH TENSION RADIANT BEAMS (Teleforce)

Recent developments tend to fulfill the old, old dream of power transmission without wires. For years men have labored in vain to transmit power without wires and thus solve a myriad of transportation problems, such as a propelling vehicles, ships, trains, aircraft, etc., without having to include a source of power in their construction. It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true.

Dr. Tesla, whose discoveries in electrical science have won for him recognition as the father of modern methods of generating and distributing electrical energy, asserted his "absolute" belief that he would win the Pierre Guzman prize of the Institute of France for his discovery relating to the interstellar transmission of energy. Following his annual custom, Dr. Tesla played host to a group of newspaper men at his birthday luncheon at the Hotel New Yorker and issued the announcement of his discoveries of the last year. No apparatus or sketches were shown, but Dr. Tesla said in announcing perfection of the principle of a new tube, which he said would make it possible to smash the atom and produce cheap radium, that he would be able to give a demonstration in 'only a little time. #echo #park #dam #conspiracy #dinosaurs #hoas Hydro-electric power has been banned on the Colorado River because of the Dinosaur National Monument, (a rock tooth), since 1915. If you believe in Dinosaurs, you believe in BANNING FOREVER low-cost Hydro-Electric power, cheap back-up power, 24/7 power, free water, irrigation, flood control, boating, fishing etc. -- Echo Park Dam Controversy[edit] Main article: Echo Park Dam. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation plans for a ten-dam, billion dollar Colorado River Storage Project began to arouse opposition in the early 1950s when it was announced that one of the proposed dams would be at

Echo Park, in the middle of Dinosaur National Monument. The controversy assumed major proportions, dominating conservation politics for years. David Brower, executive director of the Sierra Club, and Howard Zahniser of The Wilderness Society led an unprecedented nationwide campaign to preserve the free-flowing rivers and scenic canyons of the Green and Yampa Rivers. They argued that, if a national monument was not safe from development, how could any wildland be kept intact?[citation needed] On the other side of the argument were powerful members of Congress from western states, who were committed to the project in order to secure water rights, obtain cheap hydroelectric power and develop reservoirs as tourist destinations. After much debate, Congress settled on a compromise that eliminated Echo Park Dam and authorized the rest of the project. The Colorado River Storage Project Act became law on April 11, 1956. It stated, "that no dam or reservoir constructed under the authorization of the Act shall be within any National Park or Monument."[citation needed] Historians view the Echo Park Dam controversy as signaling the start of an era that includes major conservationist political successes such as the Wilderness Act and the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act.[citation needed] https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dinosaur\_National\_Monument

March 8th 1907, prior to the 1907 stock market crash that bankrupt Westinghouse & Tesla, Nikola Tesla secured "all" patents on "Tuned Lightning", the processes, appliances, generation, transmission, transformation, distribution, direction, storage, regulation, control and economic utilization. March 25th 1907, the NYSE began to plummet on panic selling leading to the stock market crash of 1907, the bankruptcy of Westinghouse & Tesla and the bailout of the US Gov. by JP Morgan.

There are many videos showing experiments of Wireless Power Beaming available on YouTube, most all mention either the 1964 Raytheon Microwave Helicopter experiments or the 1975 JPL Goldstone tests. The official NASA JPL Goldstone PR video alone has over 40 thousand views on YouTube. We have something extra to add to the collection. In the 1980's the manager of the projects, who many rightly name as "The Man Behind Microwave Power Beaming," SSI Senior Advisor Dr. Bill Brown of Raytheon Labs, made a special version of videos of those tests featuring his own voiceover for a more technically interested audience. The Space Studies Institute is very proud to bring this SSI Engineering classic back to the public. Please tell others about it.

#eu #energy #democracy Dec 11th 2017 For the first time, the EU would recognise a universal right for citizens to produce, store and sell renewable electricity, free of any surcharges such as tariffs for grid connections. EU Parliament and the national governments are currently finalising their respective positions on the "Clean energy for all Europeans" package, which will shape energy policy across Europe for the next decade. On December 18, EU energy ministers are expected to reach an agreement on future laws about renewables and energy union governance. <http://www.crowdfundres.eu/news/eu-clean-energy-package-chance-energy-citizens/>

"The price of electricity is dropping to $0.00 Kw/hr and will stay there" Cost of solar rooftop is to be at the same or even cheaper than an asphalt roof," the then you have free solar or negative-cost solar and that day is not too far away."

<https://cleantechnica.com/2017/11/27/amid-ev-surge-austin-eyes-new-way-business-episode-48-local-energy-rules-podcast/> This record low price of green electricity on earth, just beats out the 1.79¢/kWh from Saudi Arabia, and is part of a pattern marching toward 1¢/kWh bids that are coming in 2019 (or sooner). I predict that in 2019 we're going to see 1¢/kWh from a solar power project – and this low price will be primarily driven by increasing solar panel efficiencies <https://electrek.co/2017/11/16/cheapest-electricity-on-the-planet-mexican-solar-power/>

Slaying the $5 Trillion Utility grid Beast with Nikola Tesla's Wireless Power? Can it be vanquished? The Wireless Power Grid: More Than A 100 Years In The Making. By Julianne Geiger - Nov 19, 2017 <http://oilprice.com/Energy/Energy-General/The-Wireless-Power-Grid-More-Than-A-100-Years-In-The-Making.html> Jan. 4th 2018 Internet of Energy can cut power transmission losses: Nobel laureate. The Japanese scientist describes it as 'energy, anytime and anywhere', and an important feature of this is wireless power transmission. Amano says that transmission losses can be reduced to zero using laser light. The technology, when implemented could be a major boon for India that suffers from massive transmission losses — as high as 20-50 per cent in some states. Amano says Japanese scientists have achieved about 40 per cent efficiency in wireless transmission of power through a microwave band. However, power can be transmitted only up to a distance of 100 metres, and the scientists are working on increasing the efficiency levels to 80 per cent.

Since microwave bands are not suitable for long-distance transmission, scientists are now experimenting with laser technology, where power is beamed from one point to another. Amano says that transmission losses can be reduced to zero using this method. However, a lot of work remains to be done as the current efficiency on the receiving side is just 20 per cent.

Greentechmedia Podcast: Electricity prices to drop to $0, even negative prices, and to stay there. Wood Mackenzie's Prajit Ghosh describes why low-price events are becoming more common in wholesale markets than high-price events. He'll also look at the impact on other generation sources. MAKE Consulting's Dan Shreve talks about what's driving cost reductions in wind. And GTM's Shayle Kann looks at the "vicious cycle" of low prices and how to manage the wholesale market transition in the U.S.

Best of all, Niagara Falls was paid off in 1904, and has generated $40 Billion in profits to run Ontario's public services. A fruit salad?  $E=MC^2$  is an alleged relationship, but Energy is not Mass nor Matter, therefore it is an invalid relationship. Plus, C is a allegedly a Constant not a limit. Nikola Tesla set the speed of his electric waves on a charged "sphere" to be  $1.57C$ , therefore it also makes the relationship relative to the speed of your waves. Lithium. Thorium and Uranium are all salts that can be derived from mines, salt flats to Ocean water, in Unlimited quantities. A clay matrix of allegedly Radium and Salt that could be manufactured fit $1 a kg, by 1931, was used in his Pierce-Arrow car; would run at 88 mph and the clay matrix would be swapped about once a week. Then, the US and UN, along with Greenpeace and Scientologists proceeded to lobby the EPA to .ban Radium, Uranium and to some extent even Lithium (on planes and in toys for example).

All 12 major police shootings of blacks involved police killing people over Marijuana. Colin Kaepernick real protest is the fact that every shooting listed below involved "Marijuana". The "bodies in the street" quote by Kaepernick is that police murder people for having, using or selling marijuana such as Michael Brown, Tamir Rice, Magdiel Sanchez, Sandra Bland, Freddie Gray, Philando Castile, Eric Garner, John Crawford III, Alton Sterling, Sean Bell, and countless others... mostly African American—who were either killed by police or died suspiciously in police custody. Castile's and a few of Gray's killers were acquitted, and Rice's, Crawford's, Garner's, and Brown's killers—along with the other officers investigated in the Gray case—have not stood trial.

99 % of Oxycodone headed for the U.S. comes from Poppy's in Afghanistan. Opium (poppy tears, with the scientific name: Lachryma papaveris) is the dried latex obtained from the opium poppy (scientific name: Papaver somniferum).[4] Opium latex contains approximately 12 percent of the analgesic alkaloid morphine, which is processed chemically to produce heroin and other synthetic opioids for medicinal use and for illegal drug trade. The latex also contains the closely related opiates codeine and thebaine, and non-analgesic alkaloids such as papaverine and noscapine.

For its anode, the rechargeable flow battery uses cheap, abundant sulfur dissolved in water. An aerated liquid salt solution in the cathode continuously takes in and releases oxygen that balances charge as ions shuttle between the electrodes. Oxygen flowing into the cathode causes the anode to discharge electrons to an external circuit. Oxygen flowing out sends electrons back to the anode, recharging the battery.

By the end of the 1890s Tesla had come to the conclusion that it might be possible to transmit electrical power without wires at high altitudes where the air is thinner, and consequently it is more conductive. In a patent US645,576 - System of Transmission of Electrical Energy - March 20, 1900 Tesla claimed: "it has become possible to transmit through even moderately rarefied strata of atmosphere electrical energy to practically any amount and to any distance." <https://teslaresearch.jimdo.com/colorado-springs-lab-1899-1900/>

June-December 1899 Nikola Tesla was the first to scientifically document the artificial generation of fog by atmospheric ionization in his Colorado Springs lab, later reporting: "In Colorado I succeeded one day in precipitating a dense fog, so dense that when the hand was held only a few inches from the face it could not be seen." <http://www.shamanicengineering.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/07/Nikola-Tesla-Colorado-Springs-Notes-1899-1900.pdf>

#robertelee #hammond #tesla Nikola Tesla (900 patents and inventions) & close confidant John Hays Hammond's (800 patents), is a close friend and graduated at West Point with General Robert E Lee Jr & Franklin Pierce (of Pierce-Arrow); in the book "The Life and Times of Nikola Tesla" ... Mr Tesla in 1892 showed that true Hertzian effect was not a means to communicate with a receiving station at any great distance. He demonstrated that waves propagated at a transmitting station traveled along the ground as a conductor. Today in 1912 it is acknowledged that these views are correct... Having studied Tesla's method of selective tuning, Jack came to call it the "1903 prophetic genius patent" Tesla's system resembled a combination lock; devices could be made to respond not only to one frequency but two, three or more. The combined arrangement, analogous today's TV and telephone scramblers, would not only ensure privacy, it would also allow for a system with a virtually unlimited number of separate channels.

The world's biggest oil producers are starting to take electric vehicles seriously as a long-term threat. OPEC quintupled its forecast for sales of plug-in EVs, and oil producers from Exxon Mobil Corp. to BP Plc also revised up their outlooks in the past year, according to a study by Bloomberg New Energy Finance released on Friday. The London-based researcher expects those cars to reduce oil demand 8 million barrels by 2040, more than the current combined production of Iran and Iraq.

electricity to the entire northeastern U.S. AC power transmission was just one of a host of Tesla's technology disruptions, which includes radio. Tesla believed that power could be broadcast like radio, supplying free electricity for all. Of course, even had his idea worked, Tesla's financiers, who included G.E. co-founder J.P. Morgan, would have turned the tower and the innovation into a profit center for themselves and cut Tesla out, a recurring theme during the commercially-naïve Tesla's career.

Tesla believed that power could be broadcast like radio, supplying free electricity for all. Of course, even had his idea worked, Tesla's financiers, who included G.E. co-founder J.P. Morgan, would have turned the tower and the innovation into a profit center for themselves and cut Tesla out, a recurring theme during the commercially-naïve Tesla's career.

#nikola #tesla #birthday Happy 161st Birthday, Nikola Tesla -- July 10 marks the 161st birthday of the peripatetic inventor responsible for our electrical power system, particularly the Niagara Falls hydroelectric station, the first-ever, which supplies electricity to the entire northeastern U.S. AC power transmission was just one of a host of Tesla's technology disruptions, which includes radio. Tesla believed that power could be broadcast like radio, supplying free electricity for all. Of course, even had his idea worked, Tesla's financiers, who included G.E. co-founder J.P. Morgan, would have turned the tower and the innovation into a profit center for themselves and cut Tesla out, a recurring theme during the commercially-naïve Tesla's career.

(THIS IS THE LIKELY SYSTEM THAT PROVIDED THE ELECTRICITY FOR TESLA'S 1899, COLORADO SPRINGS EXPERIMENTS, where Tesla succeeded in sending electrical waves around the Earth. During that time Tellurium was mined from the streets of Colorado Springs and the Tellurium (white gold) metal that was responding to Nikola Tesla's Colorado Springs Lab Apparatus by exemplifying reports in the local newspapers "Sparks left from the street to people's shoes", "The (presumably mercury-gas) lights in downtown Colorado Springs mysteriously lit-up".

June 19, 2017 Oil barrons valuation ends down 17% for the year at 7-month low after failing to shake off supply worries. The bearish view is likely to remain the dominant sentiment in the short term. Recent options contracts show traders are hedging for the potential of oil falling below $41 a barrel in the months ahead, said Chris Kettenmann, chief energy strategist at New York-based Macro Risk Advisors. "It's a race to the bottom," he noted, adding that investors may be "betting on further downside."

Benson for Electrical Experimenter, March 1920 Recent developments tend to fulfill the old, old dream of power transmission without wires. For years men have labored in vain to transmit power without wires and thus solve a myriad of transportation problems, such as a propelling vehicles, ships, trains, aircraft, etc., without having to include a source of power in their construction. It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true. By one bold stroke an English genius, Mr. John Hettinger, has unthinkingly opened up the way for its realization. Like numerous other inventions, the way lay before our very eyes, but we were all too bling to see it. While working on a means for transmitting radio waves without material aerials, MR. Hettinger hit upon the idea of using ionized light beams as elevated conductors. Obviously simple when one thinks of it. It is a well-known fact that an ionized gas is a conductor; in fact, the conductivity of a gas is a measure of its ionization. Furthermore, it is possible to ionize a gas by means of a stream of ultra violet rays. Working with these facts, Mr. Hettinger devised means to utilize them for radio transmission in the following manner. As shown in Fig. 1, a source of ultra violet rays, an arc or mercury vapor lamp. A. is arranged to throw a beam of ionizing rays vertically. These rays result in an ionized stream of air that acts as a conductor, the surrounding un-ionized air being practically a perfect insulator. By making connection to this conducting beam with a metallic screen or mesh at B, it can be utilized as an aerial for radio communication. We are perfectly aware that this ionized beam rapidly loses its conducting power as the distance from the source increases, therefore the effective height of such an arrangement is determined by the intensity of the ray generator. So much for the idea as applied to radio communication. But let us consider further. In studying the spectrum we find that the sunlight on reaching the earth contains few ultra violet rays of shorter wavelengths than 3.000 Angstrom units, yet we are able to generate much shorter rays with an arc light. It is unreasonable to assume that shorter waves do not leave the sun, and in view of the fact that it has been determined that the upper stratum of our atmosphere is ionized, it is accepted that the shorter rays are absorbed to cause this ionization. It will now be apparent that a very good condition exists for the transmission of energy without wires. As shown in Fig. 2, we have the earth, a good conductor, surrounded with a blanket of insulating air about ten miles thick, beyond which, up to about a hundred miles, the air is highly rarefied and kept in a state of ionization by light from the sun and stars. Hence, we have two good conductors separated by several miles of atmosphere, practically a perfect insulator, an ideal arrangement for our purposes. We have but to connect a source of current to the earth and to the ionized strata of air and energy can be transmitted entirely around the earth without wires. The energy could be utilized in any part of the earth by merely connecting to the pair of conductors. This condition has been recognized for some time, but the difficulty lies in making connections to the upper layer of conducting atmosphere. It is hardly practical to construct towers six or seven miles high for the purpose, then again the energy could not be utilized without using a similar structure at the point of reception, which makes this scheme hardly feasible for aircraft or moving vehicles. Return then to the ionized stream for radio aerials. We can easily construct arcs that will throw a beam ten or twenty miles. Then why not make connection to that upper stratum with an ionized stream of air? Wonderful in its simplicity. In Fig. 2 the writer attempts to portray a generating station embodying these principles. In the main building will be housed the generating units for supplying the current to the arc and the primary of the high voltage apparatus for transmission of energy. Supported on the roof of this structure will be a monstrous arc lamp capable of throwing a stream of ultra violet rays for at least ten miles. In this beam is supported a conducting screen to make connection to the conducting stream of ionized air. The insulation of these parts present no great difficulties to modern engineering. The building will also house a huge step-up transformer, a set of high voltage condensers, a spark gap either of the rotary or quenched type and a huge oscillation transformer or Tesla coil. These instruments are connected in the usual manner and tuned so that the inductance in the circuit and the capacity formed by the earth and ionized upper strata will have a well defined oscillation period. By these means the whole earth will become an electrified body, energy to be drawn at any point by simply making metallic connection to the earth and pointing a beam of light vertically, a screen being used to take the energy that will flow down the beam. An inductance coil being necessary in the circuit to insure resonance with the transmitter at the receiving set. After once started, the receiving energy can be used to keep the arc going. Ships will have an arc and reflector mounted on the masts, airplanes have two arcs, one on top, the other below, and so on. This scheme will not interfere with present short range transmission, it being hardly practical for each home to have an arc on the roof when one arc would serve for a town and several for a large city. Rather its benefit will lie in the utilization of water falls far from civilization, now unused on account of difficulties in transmitting the power hundreds or thousands of miles. Aside from the transmission of power other advantages may accrue. Will such a stress between the earth and upper air strata reduce the presence of dust particles in the atmosphere? Or, again, cause the immediate condensation of fogs and moisture in the air to give us perfectly cloudless days? Perhaps it will become simply a matter of changing the frequency or voltage of the current to cause rain or to prevent it. Then the question of effect on radio communication: will it make our present sets obsolete, a transmitter of the future being connected directly to the power set and acting by superimposing different frequencies on the power frequency? Or will radio-telephony work hand in hand with the power system, the voice currents being impressed on the power circuit and filtered out at the receiver? There are thousand and one things such an arrangement might effect. Will trees and vegetation increase in growth as experiments in electrical culture would indicate? What effect would such stresses have on germs and bacilli? Their numbers will be decreased by the destructive effects of the ultra-violet light. Will man grow to an unsuspected height and become uniformly healthier due to the electrical treatment he would be constantly undergoing? And so on – conjuncture in without bounds, but the scheme is practical to all appearances; it requires but some financial genius to give it a trial. And to think it all was within reach such a short time ago! Had Tesla but put a gigantic arc on top of the tower of his experimental station in Long Island accurate data would be at hand now – were it but even a promise it would mean another step towards the final mastery of all matter by man.

Vanita CookWow Chris you did such an outstanding job (as usual). Greed has stolen so much from civilization. It is so sad (under statement) It broke and destroyed a very good man, and many others. To think where we would be if the great man Nikola Tesla had been encouraged and his genius embraced. No wars, no bodies harmed, everyone fed, every one having homes in a perfect environment. I hate nothing but almost because of the sadness of thinking of the man Nikola Tesla whos dreams to help humanity were strangled in the hands of greed. Thank you son. Namaste

May 15, 2017 Princeton University Invention produces cleaner water with less energy and no filter. Researchers have found a way to clean particles from water by mixing in carbon dioxide. The gas changes the water's chemistry, which causes particles to move to one side of the water depending on their chemical charge. By taking advantage of the motion, the researchers can split a water stream and filter out suspended particles. <https://www.sciencedaily.com/releases/2017/05/170515091124.htm>

June 7th 2017 Renewable energy saw a record boost in 2016 and at lower cost dominated by Hydropower. Christiana Figueres, the former UN climate chief who delivered the Paris agreement and is now convenor of Mission 2020, said: "The economic case for renewables as the backbone of our global energy system is increasingly clear and proven. Offering ever greater bang-for-buck, renewables are quite simply the cheapest way to generate energy in an ever-growing number of countries."

June 7th 2017 Renewable energy saw a record boost in 2016 and at lower cost dominated by Hydropower. Christiana Figueres, the former UN climate chief who delivered the Paris agreement and is now convenor of Mission 2020, said: "The economic case for renewables as the backbone of our global energy system is increasingly clear and proven. Offering ever greater bang-for-buck, renewables are quite simply the cheapest way to generate energy in an ever-growing number of countries."

The True Wireless Electrical Experimenter, May 1919 - In this remarkable and complete story of his discovery of the "True Wireless" and the principles upon which transmission and reception, even in the present day systems, are based, Dr. Nikola Tesla shows us that he is indeed the "Father of the Wireless." To him the Hertz wave theory is a delusion; it looks sound from certain angles, but the facts tend to prove that it is hollow and empty. He convinces us that the real Hertz waves are blotted out after they have traveled but a short distance from the sender. It follows, therefore, that the measured antenna current is no indication of the effect, because only a small part of it is effective at a distance. The limited activity of pure Hertz wave transmission and reception is here clearly explained, besides showing definitely that in spite of themselves, the radio engineers of today are employing the original Tesla tuned oscillatory system. He shows by examples with different forms of aerials that the signals picked up by the instruments must actually be induced by earth currents—not etheric space waves. Tesla also disproves the "Heaviside layer" theory from his personal observations and tests. EDITOR. "For more than eighteen years I have been reading treatises, reports of scientific transactions, and articles on Hertz-wave telegraphy, to keep myself informed, but they have always impress me like WORKS OF FICTION." Nikola Tesla

My Inventions V - The Magnifying Transmitter Electrical Experimenter June, 1919 - Imagine a man a century ago, bold enough to design and actually build a huge tower with which to transmit the human voice, music, pictures, press news and even power, thru the earth to any distance whatever without wires! He probably would have been hung or burnt at the stake. So when Tesla built his famous tower on Long Island he was a hundred years ahead of his time. And foolish ridicule by our latter day arm-chair "savants," does not in the least mar Tesla's greatness. The titanic brain of Tesla has hardly produced a more amazing wonder than this "magnifying transmitter."

Nikola Tesla's last report on Wireless Power in the March 3rd 1920 issue of Electrical Experimenter; the issue contains issues such as 1) Tesla's Wireless Power, 2) Tesla's AC-DC Monopolar Motors (Dynamo's), 3) Tesla's method of signaling using Infrared IR/UV Rays with Selenium receivers, 4) The "Miracle" of Radium to be used as an Atomic Battery in Tesla's 1931 Pierce-Arrow, atmospheric powered car... Much more analysis on these Tesla subjects in the Electrical Experimenter (Coming Soon)

The mightiest economic power (so far), U.S., rose to its zenith on an ocean of virtually free energy – coal first, then oil. American oil at 35 cents per million Btu (= $2 barrels) or $8.50 per mBtu ($50 barrels). If you own a car that gets 25 miles per gallon and you are paying $2.50 per gallon, the cost per mile is 10 cents. Using 24 hour unremitting Hydropower at around 6 cents per kWh (retail), 2-3 cents wholesale or less, similar for Wind & Solar, you will pay 1-2 cents per mile, or a tenth of the clunker/hog benchmark. Considering that your EV only has a handful of moving parts, against more than 1,000 in a typical internal combustion model (ICE-age), the outcome of this race should be clear to all. <http://oilprice.com/Alternative-Energy/Renewable-Energy/Is-The-US-Getting-Left-Behind-In-The-Renewable-Race.html> -- Tucson Electric has just announced it will buy power from a 100 MW array for less than 3 cents: Miles for a penny. And as this chart shows, PV can get cheaper still. With projects already coming in at 3 cents and room to improve module lifetimes to 50 years in conjunction with very low degradation rates (0.2 percent per year), perhaps 1-cent solar is in sight. #opec #meeting #vs #free #energy May 25, 2017 Is The U.S. Getting Left Behind In The Renewable Race? The mightiest economic power (so far), U.S., rose to its zenith on an ocean of virtually free energy – coal first, then oil. American oil at 35 cents (= $2 barrels). If you get 25 MPG and paying $2.50/gal, cost per mile is 10 cents. Using 24 hour Hydropower at 6 cents per kWh (retail), 2-3 cents wholesale or less, similar for Wind & Solar, you pay 1-2 cents per mile, or a tenth of the clunker/hog benchmark. Considering that your EV only has a handful of moving parts, against more than 1,000 in a typical internal combustion model ICE-age), the outcome of this race should be clear to all. <http://oilprice.com/Alternative-Energy/Renewable-Energy/Is-The-US-Getting-Left-Behind-In-The-Renewable-Race.html> -- Tucson Electric has just announced it will buy power from a 100 MW array for less than 3 cents: Miles for a penny. Tesla did find a way to use Radium clay as the battery. He was able to manufacture the clay at $1 KG by 1931. Then of course, immediately afterwards the Government banned Radium and will demolish your house if the find any.

Correct. Lithium batteries can be charged-up using the Ions in the Ionosphere. For free... Follow-up battery technology will be impossible to explode. However, there are 100's of thousands of explosions from the Internal Combustion Engine, while 15,000 die each year, just in the U.S.

He was proven right in 1941. Prior to World War II and the attack on Pearl Harbor, in 1935 Nikola Tesla sent an elaborate technical paper, including diagrams, to a number of allied nations including the United States, Canada, England, France, the Soviet Union, and Yugoslavia, titled "New Art of Projecting Concentrated Non-Dispersive Energy Through Natural Media." (link). The paper provided the first technical description of what is today called a charged particle beam weapon. Tesla was directly communicating with the U.S. government and Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain in an effort to promote his particle beam for defense against enemy aerial attacks.

Wireless Power Transmission For Transit, Trains, Harbor Freight, Etc. A completely wireless power transmission technology capable of powering high-capacity transport (such as high-speed rail, harbor freight, and airport transportation) has been developed by the Korea Advanced Institute of Science and Technology (KAIST) and the Korea Railroad Research Institute (KRII). It is able to supply a steady and constant 60 kHz and 180 kW of power remotely. <https://evobsession.com/wireless-power-transmission-for-transit-trains-harbor-freight-etc/> -- June 2016 A Review of Dynamic Wireless Power Transfer for In-Motion Electric Vehicles http://bibliotecapleyades.net/tesla/esp\_tesla\_33.htm -- More at the Tesla Leaks Blog: <http://nikolateslasolar.blogspot.com> -- Nikola Tesla gives credit to "John Hettinger" for realizing WIRELESS POWER. In Tesla's last article on wireless Power, Electrical Experimenter, March 1920 "Wireless Transmission of Power Now Possible", Tesla refers to "John Hettinger" patents that "opened up the way for it's realization. Tesla Leaks published the Hettinger Patent on Wireless Power 4 years ago. The Hettinger Patent confirms the concept of NEGATIVE RESISTANCE in A/C Impulse systems with Mercury/Gas bulbs at a distance.

<https://youtube.com/watch?v=bh-VpC9zyqg> -- June 1917 Patent for Aerial Signaling by John Hettinger

<https://google.com/patents/US1309031> -- WIRELESS TRANSMISSION OF POWER NOW POSSIBLE by Thomas W. Benson for Electrical Experimenter, March 1920 Recent developments tend to fulfill the old, old dream of power transmission without wires. For years men have labored in vain to transmit power without wires and thus solve a myriad of transportation problems, such as a propelling vehicles, ships, trains, aircraft, etc., without having to include a source of power in their construction. It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true. By one bold stroke an English genius, Mr. John Hettinger, has unthinkingly opened up the way for its realization. Like numerous other inventions, the way lay before our very eyes, but we were all too bling to see it. While working on a means for transmitting radio waves without material aerials, MR. Hettinger hit upon the idea of using ionized light beams as elevated conductors. Obviously simple when one thinks of it. It is a well-known fact that an ionized gas is a conductor; in fact, the conductivity of a gas is a measure of its ionization. Furthermore, it is possible to ionize a gas by means of a stream of ultra violet rays. Working with these facts, Mr. Hettinger devised means to utilize them for radio transmission in the following manner. As shown in Fig. 1, a source of ultra violet rays, an arc or mercury vapor lamp. A. is arranged to throw a beam of ionizing rays vertically. These rays result in an ionized stream of air that acts as a conductor, the surrounding un-ionized air being practically a perfect insulator. By making connection to this conducting beam with a metallic screen or mesh at B, it can be utilized as an aerial for radio communication. We are perfectly aware that this ionized beam rapidly loses its conducting power as the distance from the source increases, therefore the effective height of such an arrangement is determined by the intensity of the ray generator. So much for the idea as applied to radio communication. But let us consider further. In studying the spectrum we find that the sunlight on reaching the earth contains few ultra violet rays of shorter wavelengths than 3.000 Angstrom units, yet we are able to generate much shorter rays with an arc light. It is unreasonable to assume that shorter waves do not leave the sun, and in view of the fact that it has been determined that the upper stratum of our atmosphere is ionized, it is accepted that the shorter rays are absorbed to cause this ionization. It will now be apparent that a very good condition exists for the transmission of energy without wires. As shown in Fig. 2, we have the earth, a good conductor, surrounded with a blanket of insulating air about ten miles thick, beyond which, up to about a hundred miles, the air is highly rarefied and kept in a state of ionization by light from the sun and stars. Hence, we have two good conductors separated by several miles of atmosphere, practically a perfect insulator, an ideal arrangement for our purposes. We have but to connect a source of current to the earth and to the ionized strata of air and energy can be transmitted entirely around the earth without wires. The energy could be utilized in any part of the earth by merely connecting to the pair of conductors. This condition has been recognized for some time, but the difficulty lies in making connections to the upper layer of conducting atmosphere. It is hardly practical to construct towers six or seven miles high for the purpose, then again the energy could not be utilized without using a similar structure at the point of reception, which makes this scheme hardly feasible for aircraft or moving vehicles. Return then to the ionized stream for radio aerials. We can easily construct arcs that will throw a beam ten or twenty miles. Then why not make connection to that upper stratum with an ionized stream of air? Wonderful in its simplicity. In Fig. 2 the writer attempts to portray a generating station embodying these principles. In the main building will be housed the generating units for supplying the current to the arc and the primary of the high voltage apparatus for transmission of energy. Supported on the roof of this structure will be a monstrous arc lamp capable of throwing a stream of ultra violet rays for at least ten miles. In this beam is supported a conducting screen to make connection to the conducting stream of ionized air. The insulation of these parts present no great difficulties to modern engineering. The building will also house a huge step-up transformer, a set of high voltage condensers, a spark gap either of the rotary or quenched type and a huge oscillation transformer or Tesla coil. These instruments are connected in the usual manner and tuned so that the inductance in the circuit and the capacity formed by the earth and ionized upper strata will have a well defined oscillation period. By these means the whole earth will become an electrified body, energy to be drawn at any point by simply making metallic connection to the earth and pointing a beam of light vertically, a screen being used to take the energy that will flow down the beam. An inductance coil being necessary in the circuit to insure resonance with the transmitter at the receiving set. After once started, the receiving energy can be used to keep the arc going. Ships will have an arc and reflector mounted on the masts, airplanes have two arcs, one on top, the other below, and so on. This scheme will not interfere with present short range transmission, it being hardly practical for each home to have an arc on the roof when one arc would serve for a town and several for a large city. Rather its benefit will lie in the utilization of water falls far from civilization, now unused on account of difficulties in transmitting the power hundreds or thousands of miles. Aside from the transmission of power other advantages may accrue. Will such a stress between the earth and upper air strata reduce the presence of dust particles in the atmosphere? Or, again, cause the immediate condensation of fogs and moisture in the air to give us perfectly cloudless days? Perhaps it will become simply a matter of changing the frequency or voltage of the current to cause rain or to prevent it. Then the question of effect on radio communication: will it make our present sets obsolete, a transmitter of the future being connected directly to the power set and acting by superimposing different frequencies on the power frequency? Or will radio-telephony work hand in hand with the power system, the voice currents being impressed on the power circuit and filtered out at the receiver? There are thousand and one things such an arrangement might effect. Will trees and vegetation increase in growth as experiments in electrical culture would indicate? What effect would such stresses have on germs and bacilli? Their numbers will be decreased by the destructive effects of the ultra-violet light. Will man grow to an unsuspected height and become uniformly healthier due to the electrical treatment he would be constantly undergoing? And so on – conjuncture in without bounds, but the scheme is practical to all appearances; it requires but some financial genius to give it a trial. And to think it all was within reach such a short time ago! Had Tesla but put a gigantic arc on top of the tower of his experimental station in Long Island accurate data would be at hand now – were it but even a promise it would mean another step towards the final mastery of all matter by man.

by Thomas W. Benson for Electrical Experimenter, March 1920

Recent developments tend to fulfill the old, old dream of power transmission without wires. For years men have labored in vain to transmit power without wires and thus solve a myriad of transportation problems, such as propelling vehicles, ships, trains, aircraft, etc., without having to include a source of power in their construction. It makes one's head almost reel to think of the possibilities in such an achievement and now the dream promises to come true.

By one bold stroke an English genius, Mr. John Hettinger, has unthinkingly opened up the way for its realization. Like numerous other inventions, the way lay before our very eyes, but we were all too blind to see it.

While working on a means for transmitting radio waves without material aerials, MR. Hettinger hit upon the idea of using ionized light beams as elevated conductors. Obviously simple when one thinks of it.

It is a well-known fact that an ionized gas is a conductor; in fact, the conductivity of a gas is a measure of its ionization. Furthermore, it is possible to ionize a gas by means of a stream of ultra violet rays. Working with these facts, Mr. Hettinger devised means to utilize them for radio transmission in the following manner.

As shown in Fig. 1, a source of ultra violet rays, an arc or mercury vapor lamp. A. is arranged to throw a beam of ionizing rays vertically.

These rays result in an ionized stream of air that acts as a conductor, the surrounding un-ionized air being practically a perfect insulator. By making connection to this conducting beam with a metallic screen or mesh at B, it can be utilized as an aerial for radio communication.

#wardenclyffe #tunnels #wikipedia #update Nikola Tesla invented special boring machines to dig the Wardenclyffe Tunnels. The descriptions (some from Tesla's 1923 testimony in foreclosure proceedings on the property) include that the facility had a ten by twelve foot wood and steel lined shaft sunk into the ground 120 feet (37 m) beneath the tower with a stairway inside it. Tesla stated that at the bottom of the shaft he "had special machines rigged up which would push the iron pipe, one length after another, and I pushed these iron pipes, I think sixteen of them, 300 feet, and then the current through these pipes takes hold of the earth." [19] In Tesla's words the function of this was "to have a grip on the earth so the whole of this globe can quiver." [20][21] There is also contemporaneous and later descriptions of four 100 foot long tunnels, possibly brick lined and waterproofed, radiating from the bottom of the shaft north, south, east, and west terminating back at ground level in little brick igloos. [22] Speculation on the tunnels ranges from them being for drainage, acting as access ways, or having the function of enhancing ground connection or resonance by interacting with the (Long Island Aquifer/Long Island Sound/Atlantic Ocean) water table below the tower, maybe via being filled with salt water or liquid nitrogen (for a Battery, Power-Gas, sending signals through Water, or for Magnifying Transmission using cold temperature) -- <http://teslascience.org/pages/twp/tunnels.htm> https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Wardenclyffe\_Tower

Tesla can be seen as one of the very few companies today who is at the core of this revolution, just like the bright young engineer Nikola Tesla seemed to be in his time, a good 120 years ago. But let's first point out what the different stages of this revolution are all about: <https://greenbiz.com/article/three-phases-teslas-clean-energy-revolution> -- Phase 1: The world undergoes the first large growth in the production of clean energy such as wind and solar (2000–2020). Phase 2: Growth in global energy needs is now met predominantly by renewable energy sources rather than fossil fuels (2020–2050). Phase 3: Clean energy becomes dominant in the energy mix globally, surpassing the amount generated from gas, coal and oil (2050–2080). Phase 4: The end point of the transformation of the global energy system when virtually all energy generated comes from renewable sources complemented with nuclear (2080–2100).

#oil #price #flash #crash May 12th 2017 Does This Oil Price Rally Have Legs? With oil prices spiking nearly 10 percent from last Friday's sudden, capitulation "flash crash" which was perhaps driven by Pierre Andurand liquidating his entire long book, there has been a scramble by analysts to "fit" the narrative to the price action and the sudden change in momentum, most notably by Goldman, which continues to pump one after another bullish crude note, we suppose because Goldman's prop trading desk still has some oil left to sell to clients. <http://oilprice.com/Energy/Oil-Prices/Does-This-Oil-Price-Rally-Have-Legs.html>

Russia falls further behind in renewable energy as oil keeps Putin in power. It's difficult to invest in renewable, alternative sources of energy when state-run oil pays the bills. And it's even harder for renewable energy when gasoline is all but free, courtesy of the same state. The state-run oil and gasoline industries generate about 15 percent of GDP, 35 percent of federal budget revenue, and fully 60 percent of the country's exports. They are the anniversary of dates of Nikola Tesla's destruction of his Wardenclyffe Tower on Long Island, and the former the date approved for Tesla's "Apparatus for the Utilization of Radiant Energy". President Mckinley, along with his speech at Niagara Falls, was sure to be aware of the Tesla patents and Wardenclyffe project. Prior to his assassination. --- Apparatus for the Utilization of Radiant Energy has 12 referring patents, 3 citations, referring to at least another 1000+ patents, which also have referring patents. What happened to Nikola Tesla's "Apparatus for the Utilization of Radiant Energy"? It was filed on Mar 21st, 1901, prior to the assassination of President William McKinley on September 6th-13th 1901, and was approved by the U.S. patent office on Nov 5th, 1901. <http://www.google.com/patents/US685957> and <http://www.google.com/patents/US685958>. Tesla's radiant energy and wireless works culminated from his Colorado Experiments in 1899-1900. At the time McKinley's assassination, most transportation was electric, in many cases using Nikola Tesla's patents for AC Induction Motors, Steam-Engine and Turbine Trains, Monorail and

AC Trolly's (including the electric ambulance that carried President McKinley to the hospital) were all running off of power generated at Niagara Falls. President William McKinley's last public speech at Buffalo after visiting Niagara Falls. His Niagara Falls speech is unavailable. Tesla's "Radiant Energy Receiver" was designed to be a method of wireless power reception, cohered with his "Apparatus for the Transmission of Electrical Energy" to be located at Niagara Falls. Both the receiver and transmitter included their associated working devices from lighting to motors to be used in his proposed system of non-radiative wireless transmission of electricity and power, television signals and photography, audio and radio communications for which Tesla said could vary depending on the effect desired...

All "Machines" are A/C, "Perfect" Efficiency. The intensity of the poles being maintained constant, the action of the apparatus will be perfect, and the same result will be secured as though the shifting were effected by means of a commutator with an infinite number of bars. In reality, therefore, "all machines" are alternate current machines, the currents appearing as continuous only in the external circuit during their transit from generator to motor. "All "Motors" are A/C (Alternating Currents). There is no such thing as "DC". A "Commutator" or "Brush" in DC motors turns the A/C currents into DC. - Nikola Tesla -- <https://teslaresearch.jimdo.com/lectures-of-nikola-tesla/a-new-system-of-alternate-current-motors-and-transformers-1888/>

#renewable #energy #mainstream #banning #transmission #lines #nuclear #power #safe #coal #plants #closing #solar #panel #tariffs Bloomberg New Energy Finance explains that renewable energy has gone "mainstream" compared to just three years ago -- An alliance of industry groups, environmentalists and government agencies believe habitat restoration along electric transmission line corridors could help decimated pollinator populations and cut maintenance costs. Southern Co. says it is receiving "A+" support from the Trump administration and Congress regarding the completion of its nuclear reactors in Georgia and South Carolina. -- A utility tells state regulators that it wants to close Nevada's last utility-owned, coal-burning power plant 10 years ahead of schedule. -- A petition calling for new tariffs on imported solar cells would double the cost of solar in the U.S. and threaten thousands of jobs, says the founder of SunEdison. Vaccine makers create mutated virus's in the lab; No one dies from the Measles or Mumps; nor the other diseases supposedly caused by these "virus's". You have a higher chance of being eaten whole by a shark. If 300 million people traveled 10 miles round-trip to get each vaccine, 30 people will die in traffic accidents and 300 more will be injured. #romneycare #obamacare #fake #news Obamacare is Romneycare. Romneycare promotes untested bio-warfare vaccine's as "health care", promotes the use of Chemotherapy for Death as a cure, bans Cannabis cures, bans the most effective asthma medicine, Primatene Mist Inhalers, to save the "ozone layer" (hoax), bans the most effective anti-inflammatory medicine, Prednisone and even bans the 120 year old patents of Nikola Tesla's for wireless Radio-Frequency surgery. And if you use Cannabis Oil as a cancer cure, your Romneycare will be cancelled and they will keep all your money you paid into the system.

"We report results from the experiment aimed at the artificial excitation of extremely-low-frequency (ELF) electromagnetic waves with frequencies corresponding to the frequency of Schumann resonance (typically, 7.5 - 8.0 Hz frequency range). Electromagnetic waves with these frequencies can form a standing pattern inside the spherical cavity formed by the surface of the earth and the ionosphere. In the experiment the ELF waves were excited by heating the ionosphere with X-mode HF electromagnetic waves generated by the High Frequency Active Auroral Research Program (HAARP) facility in Alaska. The experiment demonstrates that heating of the ionosphere can excite relatively large-amplitude electromagnetic waves with frequencies in the range of the Schumann resonance, when the ionosphere has a strong F-layer and an electric field greater than 5 mV/m is present in the E-region." <http://adsabs.harvard.edu/abs/2014AGUFMSA11A3918S>

Tesla Leaks contacted the Smithsonian managing editor and the writer of this story in April 2016. They were introduced to the enormous amount of inventions Nikola Tesla is responsible for. After they read Tesla Leaks, this is their follow-up story: "It's a slightly unsettling but apt metaphor for the brilliant Serbian inventor and futurist who arguably did more to shape and foretell the 20th century; he helped usher in a whole new industrial age more than anyone, yet who remains a largely forgotten historical footnote. In one golden decade beginning in 1893, he pioneered RADIO technology some two years ahead of Guglielmo Marconi, created the world's first X-RAY images, and conceived the idea of RADAR. While the late 19th-century world became enthralled with the wondrous new age of hydroelectric dams, power lines, and electric lighting available at the flick of a switch, Tesla continued to leapfrog ahead. He invented the BLADELESS TURBINES used in modern JET ENGINES and imagined a wireless future in which INFORMATION, MUSIC, PICTURES, and limitless RENEWABLE ENERGY (Wardenclyffe Tower) could be beamed around the globe instantly, free, and available for all." <http://smithsonianmag.com/travel/nikola-tesla-museum-belgrade-inventor-electricity-smithsonian-journeys-travel-quarterly-180958881/>

Tesla Leaks contacted the Smithsonian managing editor and the writer of this story in April 2016. They were introduced to the enormous amount of inventions Nikola Tesla is responsible for. After they read Tesla Leaks, this is their follow-up story: "It's a slightly unsettling but apt metaphor for the brilliant Serbian inventor and futurist who arguably did more to shape and foretell the 20th century; he helped usher in a whole new industrial age more than anyone, yet who remains a largely forgotten historical footnote. In one golden decade beginning in 1893, he pioneered RADIO technology some two years ahead of Guglielmo Marconi, created the world's first X-RAY images, and conceived the idea of RADAR. While the late 19th-century world became enthralled with the wondrous new age of hydroelectric dams, power lines, and electric lighting available at the flick of a switch, Tesla continued to leapfrog ahead. He invented the BLADELESS TURBINES used in modern JET ENGINES and imagined a wireless future in which INFORMATION, MUSIC, PICTURES, and limitless RENEWABLE ENERGY (Wardenclyffe Tower) could be beamed around the globe instantly, free, and available for all." <http://smithsonianmag.com/travel/nikola-tesla-museum-belgrade-inventor-electricity-smithsonian-journeys-travel-quarterly-180958881/>

Dr. Nikola Tesla, circa 1915 - " We have at our disposal three main sources of life-sustaining energy- fuel, water-power and the heat of the sun's rays. Engineers often speak of harnessing the tides, but the discouraging truth is that the tidewater over one acre of ground will, on the average, develop only one horse-power. Thousands of mechanics and inventors have spent their best efforts in trying to perfect wave motors, not realizing that the power so obtained could never compete with that derived from other sources.

The force of wind offers much better chances and is valuable in special instances, but is by far inadequate. Moreover, the tides, waves and winds furnish only periodic and often uncertain power and necessitate the employment of large and expensive storage plants. Of course, there are other possibilities, but they are remote, and we must depend on the first of three resources." " If we use fuel to get our power, we are living on our capital and exhausting it rapidly. This method is barbarous and wantonly wasteful, and will have to be stopped in the interest of coming generations. The heat of the sun's rays represents an immense amount of energy vastly in excess of water-power. The earth receives an equivalent of 83 foot-pounds per second for each square foot on which the rays fall perpendicularly. From simple geometrical rules applying to a spherical body it follows that the mean rate per square foot of the earth's surface is one-quarter of that, or 20 3/4 foot-pounds. This is to say over one million horse-power per square mile, or 250 times the water-power for the same area. But that is only true in theory; the practical facts put this in a different aspect." " For instance, considering the United States, and taking into account the mean latitude, the daily variation, the diurnal changes, the seasonal variations and casual changes, this power of the sun's rays reduces to about one-tenth, or 100,00 horse-power per square mile, of which we might be able to recover in high-speed low-pressure turbines 10,000 horse-power. To do this would mean the installment of apparatus and storage plants so large and expensive that such a project is beyond the pale of the practical. The inevitable conclusion is that water-power is by far our most valuable resource. On this humanity must build its hopes for the future. With its full development and a perfect system of wireless transmission of the energy to any distance man will be able to solve all the problems of material existence. Distance, which is the chief impediment to human progress, will be completely annihilated in thought, word and action. Humanity will be united, wars will be made impossible and peace will reign supreme." Nikola Tesla, September 9, 1915 as recorded to the Manufacturers Record; September 9th, 1915."The Wonder World To Be Created By Electricity." <https://web-beta.archive.org/web/20130101125913/http://www.frankgermano.net:80/oceanpower.htm>

From simple geometrical rules applying to a spherical body it follows that the mean rate per square foot of the earth's surface is one-quarter of that, or 20 3/4 foot-pounds. This is to say over one million horse-power per square mile, or 250 times the water-power for the same area. But that is only true in theory; the practical facts put this in a different aspect." " For instance, considering the United States, and taking into account the mean latitude, the daily variation, the diurnal changes, the seasonal variations and casual changes, this power of the sun's rays reduces to about one-tenth, or 100,00 horse-power per square mile, of which we might be able to recover in high-speed low-pressure turbines 10,000 horse-power. To do this would mean the installment of apparatus and storage plants so large and expensive that such a project is beyond the pale of the practical. The inevitable conclusion is that water-power is by far our most valuable resource. On this humanity must build its hopes for the future. With its full development and a perfect system of wireless transmission of the energy to any distance man will be able to solve all the problems of material existence. Distance, which is the chief impediment to human progress, will be completely annihilated in thought, word and action. Humanity will be united, wars will be made impossible and peace will reign supreme." Nikola Tesla, September 9, 1915 as recorded to the Manufacturers Record; September 9th, 1915."The Wonder World To Be Created By Electricity." <https://web-beta.archive.org/web/20130101125913/http://www.frankgermano.net:80/oceanpower.htm>

Niagara Falls system was approved on May Day 1888, when Nikola Tesla's 40+ patents for his system of A/C power generation, distribution and motors which was bought by Westinghouse for a "kings ransom". This system was used in 13 patents for Niagara Falls. Edison did not steal Tesla's inventions relating to the 40+ Alternating Current A/C Motors, Mono-Polar DC Dynamo's and Generators, nor his methods of A/C power transmission. Nikola Tesla's "Future Motive Power" in Dec 1931, included his alleged 1931 Pierce-Arrow Electric Car. The metal container described by him, was supposed to be like a "STANDING WAVE in a box", as-in a CYCLOTRON or KLYSTRON RESONANT ECHO-CHAMBER tube that could receive RADIO WAVES and amplify them by over 70 DECIBLES. Commonly used in VACUUM TUBE RADIO & RADAR. Modern MICROWAVES and CELL PHONES use MAGNETRONS. Tesla had available various receiving apparatus for the top of the car such as his RADIANT ENERGY RECEIVER. Tesla also had ASYNCHRONOUS STEPPING ELECTRIC MOTORS that use RELUCTANCE & EMF RECYCLING. He coupled the transformations with SPARK-GAP TRANSFORMERS, where the receiver is run off of the sender. Tesla also patented dozens of TRANSFORMERS and ELECTROLYTIC CAPACITORS, including using MOLTEN SALT. Tesla also had available a TESLA TURBINE, COMPOUNDING STEAM-ENGINE where only a small amount of input energy is needed. Tesla also had available lightly radioactive material ,like RADON, when exposed to radio waves, could run either electric or steam engine systems. Tesla also had available VACUUM TUBE CAPACITORS using high capacity SELF-ILLUMINATING gasses like KRYPTON, and he had a bonus option of SUPERCONDUCTIVITY, used to increase electrical oscillations using cold temperature. Further, with the concept of NEGATIVE RESISTANCE, reducing RESISTANCE or OHMS to 0, by adding internal self-referencing, MONOPOLAR, capacity, the power output would rise toward Infinity, where you would only need to "request the energy, to receive the energy" - Nikola Tesla (see Wikipedia on all words in CAPS) <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HV0MH8U3sS4> -- More on Tesla's 1931 Pierce-Arrow Electric Car Battery by Vinyasi <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gIMwn6wif8o> -- OUR FUTURE MOTIVE POWER Everyday Science and Mechanics, December 1931 <http://www.tfcbooks.com/tesla/1931-12-00.htm>

Morgan finally replies to Tesla through his secretary on October 14, 1904, that "it will be impossible for [me/ Morgan] to do anything in the matter". I have more original creations named after me than any other man that has gone before me not excepting Archimedes and Galileo -- the giants of invention. Six thousand million dollars ( 6 Trillion Dollars) are invested in enterprises based upon my discoveries in the United States today. Nikola Tesla, having already blundered, makes things worse by stating that: He is in need of more funds because of the 1907 financial panic which "you" (Morgan) had initiated. Tesla tells Morgan that if he had built Wardenclyffe at Niagara Falls (Updated with Tesla's 1911 "Tesla Turbine" Technology), as was Rankine's suggestion (a partner in the Tesla Electric Company and head of the Niagara Power Company) it would be operable by now.

New York Times, October 22, 1907, p. 8, col. 6. "Nikola Tesla Says Distance Forms No Obstacle to Transmission of Energy." There is a vast difference between primitive Hertzwave signalling, practicable to but a few miles, and the great art of wireless transmission of energy, which enables an expert to transmit, to any distance, not only signals, but power in unlimited amounts, and of which the experiments across the Atlantic are a crude application. The plants are quite inefficient, unsuitable for finer work, and totally doomed to an effect less than 1% of that I attained in my test in 1899. Edison thinks that Sir Hiram Maxim is blowing hot air. The fact is my Long Island plant will transmit almost its entire energy to the antipodes, if desired. As to [Martian communications] I can only say, that I shall be able to attain a wave activity of 800,000,000 horse power and a simple calculation will show, that the inhabitants of that planet, if there be any, need not have a Lord Raleigh to detect the disturbance. <http://tfcbooks.com/tesla/1907-10-22.htm>

New York Times, October 22, 1907, p. 8, col. 6. "Nikola Tesla Says Distance Forms No Obstacle to Transmission of Energy." There is a vast difference between primitive Hertzwave signalling, practicable to but a few miles, and the great art of wireless transmission of energy, which enables an expert to transmit, to any distance, not only signals, but power in unlimited amounts, and of which the experiments across the Atlantic are a crude application. The plants are quite inefficient, unsuitable for finer work, and totally doomed to an effect less than 1% of that I attained in my test in 1899. Edison thinks that Sir Hiram Maxim is blowing hot air. In this paper, an attempt is made in the laboratory to simulate Nikola Tesla atmospheric maser discharges. The ground lightning bolt, commonly observed, takes the form of filamentary lightning channels called the leader and the return strokes. It is taken that Nikola Tesla atmospheric discharges are obtained when a powerful high-frequency source triggers the atmospheric discharge and enables the energy stored in the cumulonimbus clouds to be released in the form of maser radiations, which are accompanied by a diffuse glow-like discharge covering a large area, as in the case of the aurora borealis. The main point in the current investigation is the generation of the powerful hydrogen atom (maser) line at 1.420 GHz recorded under the condition of high humidity present in air. This suggests that the driving frequency of high power at a frequency close to 1 GHz is capable of electrolysis of the water vapor present in air, dissociation of the hydrogen molecule into atoms, excitation of atomic hydrogen, and consequent emission from the hydrogen atoms in the manner found in the hydrogen atomic clock. <http://ieeexplore.ieee.org/document/7239615/>

A Tesla Leaks Original: Debunking Einstein -- <https://nikolateslasolar.blogspot.com/2015/10/nikola-tesla-debunks-albert-einsteins.html?view=flipcard> -- Nikola Tesla denied that Einstein's theory was true, not just because he rejected the idea that matter is convertible into energy, and energy into matter, or the existence of space-time, but because he himself had measured speeds traveling faster than light in numerous experiments... In 1899 he conducted experiments at Colorado Springs where he sent currents from his transmitter around earth and back to his receiver traveling at a mean velocity of 292,815 miles per second. On April of 1900 he published a patent on this transmitter titled the Art of Transmitting Electrical Energy Through the Natural Medium, which was just a play thing compared to his Magnifying Transmitter patented in 1914. Not only this, but as far back as 1896 he conducted experiments on cosmic rays where he measured cosmic ray velocities from the star, Antares, which he measured to be fifty times greater than the speed of light, thus demolishing one of the basic pillar of the structure of relativity.

<http://drnikolatesla.tumblr.com/post/159992409923/last-night-the-national-geographic-channel-began-a> -- Passages from Tesla's patent 787,412 were included verbatim in the introduction for special attention: -- The most essential requirement is that irrespective of frequency the wave or wave-train should continue for a certain period of time, which I have estimated to be not less than one-twelfth or probably 0.08484 of a second and which is taken in passing to and returning from the region diametrically opposite the pole over the earth's surface with a mean velocity of about 471,240 kilometers per second [292,822 miles per second, a velocity equal to one and a half times the "official" speed of light]. Nikola Tesla's inventions played at least 4 roles in WaterGate and the Pentagon Papers. First, the full Pentagon Papers have never been released. Of the released version, 11 words were redacted from final releases. Definition: A "Water Gate" is the gate that controls the water flow in a Hydro Dam. The 4 roles include 1) Secure communications 2) Bombing Hydro Dams in Vietnam 3) Weather Modification 4) Phone Tapping <http://nytimes.com/2011/07/24/sunday-review/24words.html> -- 1)) Nikola Tesla invented and patented the only methods for secure communications, multi-plexing, Telegeodynamics, submarine communications and detection "" 4. "" ...covering a two destroyer Patrol Group with on-line Crypto RATT..." (IV.C.3, p. 17) "" -- 2)) Nikola Tesla & Westinghouse held and shared with GE, over 40 patents for the generation of power, distribution and motors for Hydro Dams. Later, Hydro dams were also used to produce Hydrogen & Jet Fuel. 6. ""Of 91 known locks and dams in NVN, only 8 targeted..."(IV. C. 7 (a), p. 53) "" --

3)) Nikola Tesla proposed, created and witnessed weather modification in 1899, in Colorado Springs, and in his treatise "Problem of Increasing Human Energy" in 1900 7. "" ...obvious bid to turn ROLLING THUNDER into a punitive bombing campaign..." (IV. C. 7 (a), p. 83) "" -- 4)) Thomas Edison used his version of the Phonograph invention to tap phones for the phone company since 1878. Physical cables (to be tapped) were layed prior to 1900, from the US, to Europe, to China, to Australia. "" 11. "...9:30 a.m. today according to a telephone intercept Kosygin called Brezhnev..." #making #high #gas #prices #great #again Fake News Result: In August 2016, the oil price futures pointed toward $35 per barrel, or less, in the first quarter of 2017. Now, it's $55 per barrel and gas prices have doubled. You've been Trumped by Putin and Exxon!

Fake News vs Fake Newsfacebook.com

#fake #news #history Robert Parkinson, a professor at Binghamton University, pointed out in a piece for the Washington Post that the creation and spread of fake news stories played a role in the birth of the United States. John Adams, Parkinson notes, wrote in his diary in 1769 about creating fake and exaggerated stories that would be published in various early newspapers of the time—stories that were ultimately designed to undermine the King of England's authority in Massachusetts.

At around the same time, the governor of New Jersey secretly fabricated long pieces that were featured prominently in U.S. newspapers and journals. One, entitled "The Impartial Chronicle," claimed that the King was sending thousands of foreign soldiers to kill Americans.

Even Benjamin Franklin, who at the time was the American ambassador to France, created a fake issue of a real Boston newspaper called the Independent Chronicle, Parkinson said. In it, he told the story of American military forces who discovered bags containing scalps from 700 men, women, and children, allegedly taken by Indians in league with the King.

Historian Tim Stanley noted on Twitter (twtr) that during the hotly contested 1828 election, Andrew Jackson's campaign team started a rumor that John Quincy Adams had bought an American girl in order to satisfy the Tsar of Russia. Adams, meanwhile, spread rumors that Jackson's mother had slept with slaves and even had a child with one.

March 28th 2017 - Based on the work of Nikola Tesla, the University of Alberta team has shown how low-voltage electricity can be safely transmitted through the earth rather than using the normal two wires to carry a current. They connected a generator to a metal rod, electrifying the dirt so that LED bulbs with a special circuit lit up when they were attached to special receivers stuck in the ground about 20 metres away. Their work follows ideas explored at the turn of the 20th century by inventor Nikola Tesla, who constructed a giant tower in Long Island, N.Y., in hopes of creating a worldwide wireless transmission system. While more work remains to be done, he said the possibilities are huge. "You can make your whole work desk a source of power. Your cellphone or your laptop or other device, you can leave on the surface and it will get charged," he said. "You can put a conducting paint on the road and then drive your (electric) car without any batteries or you can have a battery that will be charged while you're driving."

<http://edmontonjournal.com/news/local-news/earths-soil-could-transmit-electricity-to-your-home-car-university-of-alberta-researchers> March 28th 2017 - Based on the work of Nikola Tesla, the University of Alberta team has shown how low-voltage electricity can be safely transmitted through the earth rather than using the normal two wires to carry a current. They connected a generator to a metal rod, electrifying the dirt so that LED bulbs with a special circuit lit up when they were attached to special receivers stuck in the ground about 20 metres away. Their work follows ideas explored at the turn of the 20th century by inventor Nikola Tesla, who constructed a giant tower in Long Island, N.Y., in hopes of creating a worldwide wireless transmission system. While more work remains to be done, he said the possibilities are huge. "You can make your whole work desk a source of power. Your cellphone or your laptop or other device, you can leave on the surface and it will get charged," he said. "You can put a conducting paint on the road and then drive your (electric) car without any batteries or you can have a battery that will be charged while you're driving." <http://edmontonjournal.com/news/local-news/earths-soil-could-transmit-electricity-to-your-home-car-university-of-alberta-researchers>
