Lani Mercado Revilla. The primary focus of the meeting was to review and address key educational concerns and to propose new projects that could further enhance the educational landscape of Bacoor. One of the main topics was the allocation and utilization of Special Education Funds for the first quarter of 2025. The LSB thoroughly examined how these funds were spent to ensure that they were directed toward initiatives that would benefit students with special needs in the city. Another important point of discussion was the proposal of new programs and projects that would be included in the supplemental budget for the year. The LSB members deliberated on how to maximize available resources and align new initiatives with the city’s overall development plans. These included potential projects that aim to improve infrastructure, expand access to quality education, and introduce new learning methodologies.

The meeting also highlighted progress on the Histurismo video project, an initiative designed to showcase Bacoor’s rich historical and cultural heritage. This project is aimed at promoting the city’s heritage to students and the broader community, helping cultivate a sense of pride and awareness about Bacoor’s history.

Additionally, the status of ongoing school building construction projects was reviewed. The meeting provided updates on the completion of school infrastructures that will address the increasing demand for classrooms in Bacoor, ensuring that schools are adequately equipped to accommodate more students.

An open discussion session followed, where other educational concerns were raised, and strategies for addressing them were explored. These included topics such as enhancing teaching resources, improving school facilities, and supporting teachers in their professional development. The meeting served as a critical platform for collaboration between the Bacoor City Government, DepEd, and the LSB. It ensured that educational programs and projects are well-coordinated and aligned with the city’s vision for progress. Mayor Revilla reiterated his commitment to improving education in Bacoor, emphasizing that the city’s development goals cannot be fully realized without the active support and involvement of the education sector.

The Local School Board meeting was a positive step toward strengthening Bacoor’s educational system, ensuring that every student receives the resources and support they need to succeed.

“We are very grateful for the support we got in Laguna. This is a huge help,” he said. “They can be sure that we will work on strengthening the agricultural sector of Laguna.”

Aquino, on the other hand, received the endorsement of three mayors from Cavite on April 30. In his statement, he committed to pushing for increased funding for the Free College Education Law to benefit more students, including those from Cavite.

Cavite and Laguna are key battlegrounds in the national elections, with a combined voting population of 4.5 million according to the Commission on Elections. Meanwhile, independent senatorial candidates continued their outreach efforts. Ariel Querubin, campaigning in South Cotabato, urged voters to choose candidates who show genuine concern for the people. He stressed the need for sustainable job opportunities amid Mindanao’s economic growth.

In Masbate, senatorial hopeful Ben Tulfo engaged with local leaders and constituents, emphasizing his intent to listen and interact directly with residents.

of free medical services. Patients received medical check-ups,dental procedures, and blood tests, ensuring that many in the community had access to health services they might not otherwise be able to afford.

For more advanced diagnostic procedures, the Foundation also deployed its mobile clinic equipped with facilities for X-rays and ECGs, providing additional diagnostic care to those in need.

One of the key features of the event was the distribution of free medicines and vitamins through the Foundation’s "Gamot para sa Kapwa" initiative, which continues to be an essential part of their outreach programs. This initiative is designed to address the immediate medical needs of underprivileged individuals by providing basic healthcare supplies, ensuring that essential medication reaches those who need it most.

SM Foundation’s medical mission in General Trias was just one part of a long-standing tradition of service. Since its inception in 2001, the Foundation has conducted thousands of medical missions and served over 1.2 million Filipinos nationwide. The Foundation’s goal is not only to provide healthcare services but also to foster a sense of community care and responsibility, especially in rural areas where access to healthcare can be limited.

As the event concluded, patients left with a renewed sense of hope, knowing that SM Foundation will continue to stand by them, bringing healthcare services directly to their communities. The success of this mission reflects the importance of such outreach efforts, highlighting the Foundation’s role in making healthcare more accessible to all Filipinos, regardless of their location or socioeconomic status. Source: Manila Bulletin accountability in public service. “Public office is a public trust. Our government officials are in their positions because the people trust them. People will trust them if these public officials govern with accountability and integrity,” he said

Taking off from the university’s Sustainable Barangay Leadership and Governance (BALAG) and the ongoing implementation of the Barangay Peace and Conflict Transformation (B-PACT) Executive Programs, B-LEAD provides barangay and Sangguniang Kabataan officials the skills and knowledge on the principles of ethical and sustainable governance and their role in upholding ethical and accountable public service. “[Government] Positions are public property. We run for office because we believe that we can contribute to national and local development. We are there because the people trust us. Remember that running for a position and occupying a position is always for public service, not personal interest.” Thelma Vecina, executive director of the Local Government Academy (LGA), emphasized the shared responsibility of local government units in upholding accountability at the grassroots level.

“Governance should be shared. The barangay captain cannot do it alone, and the Sangguniang Barangay cannot manage the barangay by themselves. They need partners and allies in governance.”

Nencita Costelo, Local Government Operations Officer of the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) emphasized the importance of ethical leadership in ushering in developments in barangays.

“When you serve the barangay with your heart, your compassion for the people naturally follows. You cannot truly serve the barangay and prioritize the welfare of the people if you do not have the heart for it.”

Costelo added that the DILG determines the level of ethical leadership by barangay officials through the effectiveness of services at the grassroots level.

“We have barangays that excel because of ethical leadership. The DILG has created parameters to determine how barangays perform,” Costelo added, citing the Seal of Good Local Governance for Barangay (SGLGB) as an example.

The B-LEAD Executive Program is aligned with the United Nation’s Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) in ensuring transparent, inclusive, and sustainable governance, as well as the AmbisyonNation2040, the country’s long-term vision for a prosperous, inclusive, and resilient society by 2040. efforts to maintain a malaria-free Cavite.

The program brought together healthcare professionals from various sectors—including public and private hospitals, Rural Health Units (RHUs), and local health offices—underscoring the critical role of community-based medical practitioners in the fight against malaria and other vector-borne diseases.

The activity officially opened with a warm and inspiring welcome from Dr. Nelson Soriano, Provincial Health Officer I, who acknowledged the invaluable contributions of frontline healthcare workers and their continued commitment to public health. Dr.

Soriano highlighted the province’s achievements in controlling malaria cases and emphasized the importance of multi-sectoral collaboration in sustaining Cavite’s malaria-free status.

A series of technical sessions followed, designed to equip participants with updated knowledge and practical strategies.

Mr. Jommel Mojica, Nurse V from the Department of Health (DOH), led the first lecture with a comprehensive presentation on the latest data concerning vector-borne diseases, as well as current surveillance and control strategies being implemented at the national and local levels.

This was succeeded by an in-depth discussion from Mr. Raffy MacDonald, Nurse II of the OPHO, who introduced the 1-3-5 Strategy—a timely and structured framework that mandates the reporting, investigation, and response to malaria cases within one, three, and five days, respectively.

This strategy is seen as an essential tool in ensuring prompt action and preventing localized outbreaks.

The program concluded with closing remarks from Dr. Armand Dotollo, who commended the unwavering dedication of Cavite’s health workers.

He urged continued vigilance, active surveillance, and community engagement as cornerstones in the sustained elimination of malaria.

Dr. Dotollo also reaffirmed the provincial government’s support in empowering local health units through capacity building, training, and access to timely resources.

World Malaria Day serves as a powerful reminder of the ongoing battle against preventable diseases and the collective responsibility to safeguard public health.

With initiatives like these, Cavite remains firmly committed to the global goal of "Zero Malaria – Draw the Line Against Malaria." — Office of Public Information and Outreach (OPIO)

PNPA Class 2029 Takes Oath, Begins Journey Toward Police Service

The Philippine National Police Academy (PNPA) held its Oath-Taking and Reception Rites for PNPA Class 2029 on May 5, 2025, at Camp General Mariano N. Castañeda in Silang, Cavite. The event marked a significant milestone for 310 incoming cadets who officially took their oath, signifying the start of their transformation into future public safety leaders.

These cadets are set to undergo four years of intensive academic, physical, and leadership training to prepare them as commissioned officers in the Philippine National Police. Their journey formally began with the solemn oath, representing their commitment to discipline, duty, and national service.

Police Lieutenant General Edgar Alan O. Okubo, The Chief of the Directorial Staff, served as the Guest of Honor and Speaker. In his keynote address, he urged the cadets to embody discipline, integrity, and selfless service. He emphasized that the values of leadership and responsibility must be practiced starting now, not only upon graduation.

Following the oath-taking, the traditional Reception Rites commenced—a symbolic and challenging rite of passage where upperclass cadets welcomed the neophytes into the Cadet Corps. This tradition, both physically demanding and emotionally charged, is designed to instill resilience and camaraderie among the new cadets.

Families, academy officials, and guests watched with pride as the new cadets embraced their new path. For PNPA Class 2029, this day signified not just an entry into the academy, but the beginning of a lifelong commitment to service, sacrifice, and leadership in public safety.

Hometown Pride and Prayers for Papal Contender Cardinal Tagle

IMUS, Cavite — Cardinal Luis Antonio Tagle, a Philippine favorite for the papacy, has garnered widespread support from his hometown, but one longtime acquaintance has expressed caution over his potential elevation to the Vatican's top position.

Sister Marilena Narvaez, 83, who has known Tagle for nearly 50 years, shared her apprehension, saying she refrains from praying for him to become pope due to concerns about the political landscape in Rome. Despite her view, many locals from Imus, where Tagle began his journey in the Church, enthusiastically back his papal candidacy.

Tagle's reputation for advocating for the poor, a focus that defined his nearly two decades serving the Imus diocese, has left a lasting impression on former parishioners. "He is not a saint, but his tears fall easily for the poor," said Maria Minda Ortiz, a local candle vendor who fondly recalled how Tagle helped her family.

With a track record as a reformer, particularly in his stance against the controversial drug war under former President Rodrigo Duterte, Tagle has become a global figure. His accessible nature, including his active social media presence, has earned him a large following. Yet, some critics have raised concerns about his stance on issues like child protection, with some even questioning his role in the Church's handling of sexual abuse allegations.

Despite mixed opinions, the community remains hopeful. "If he becomes the chosen one, it would be to our glory as Filipinos," said Francisco Abella Jr., a local lay minister. As for Tagle, those who know him best agree that he will face whatever comes his way with grace—much like he did when he lost a childhood spelling bee by a single word, "char-treuse."

As the conclave approaches, Imus remains a town of pride, prayers, and anticipation for their beloved son.

PLDT to build Php40B Data << P1

boast a remarkable 100 MW capacity—twice the capacity of the Sta. Rosa data center—and is set to play a crucial role in the country's push to become a regional hub for data storage and digital services.

PLDT Chairman Manuel V. Pangilinan made the announcement during the inauguration of the VITRO Sta. Rosa data center, where he underscored the company's commitment to expanding its data center network. "We intend to expand our data center capacity to up to 500 megawatts (MW)," Pangilinan said, further stressing the company's mission to make the Philippines a competitive data center hub in Southeast Asia.

The Cavite data center, which will be located on a 10-hectare lot owned by Metro Pacific Investment Corp (MPIC), will help propel this goal forward, marking a significant milestone in PLDT's strategic growth.

The decision to build in Cavite highlights the region's growing importance in the country's digital economy. With the facility's planned 100 MW capacity, the Cavite site will play a central role in meeting the increasing demand for data storage and processing driven by digital transformation, cloud computing, and the rise of artificial intelligence (AI). Pangilinan noted that this facility will not only meet the needs of local businesses but also attract international players seeking reliable and scalable data storage solutions.

The Cavite project will be developed in five phases, each with an estimated capacity of 20 MW. Construction is expected to start in 2026, with the full facility anticipated to be operational by 2028. As the largest data center in the country once completed, it will have a profound effect on the region's economy, bringing new job opportunities, fostering technological innovation, and positioning Cavite as a key player in the fast-growing global data center industry.

PLDT's move is also part of a larger race among telecom giants to capture a significant share of the growing demand for data infrastructure. Rivals like Globe Telecom are also expanding their data center footprints in the Philippines, but PLDT's investments are setting a clear direction for the future of the country's digital infrastructure. Pangilinan emphasized that this expansion is crucial for the country's competitiveness in the global economy, especially with the increasing adoption of AI and the ever-expanding digital world.

Beyond the technological implications, the Cavite data center project will undoubtedly have a long-lasting impact on the local community. As the facility grows in scale and importance, the influx of investment is expected to create thousands of jobs, from construction and technical roles to long-term positions in operations and maintenance.

This will not only enhance Cavite's reputation as a prime location for investment but also help meet the growing demand for skilled workers in the tech sector, providing a significant boost to the local economy.

The development of the new data center aligns with the broader trend of digital infrastructure expansion in Southeast Asia, where demand for data processing, cloud services, and AI capabilities is rapidly increasing. The Philippines is quickly becoming a key player in this transformation, and with this new data center in Cavite, PLDT aims to put the country on the map as a leader in data storage and processing in the region.

This ambitious project also comes at a time when the Philippines is experiencing accelerated digital growth, with businesses and government agencies alike increasingly relying on cloud services, cybersecurity solutions, and AI technologies. The Cavite data center will serve as a critical hub to support these innovations, ensuring that businesses and organizations in the country have access to the infrastructure necessary to compete in the global digital economy.

In conclusion, PLDT's Php40 billion data center project in Cavite is not only a significant step for the company but a landmark moment for the Philippines. It will solidify the country's role in the global digital landscape, create thousands of jobs, and provide the region with the infrastructure needed to support the growth of the digital economy for years to come. Unilever Powers Cavite Foods Plant with Renewables Unilever Philippines has taken a major step toward sustainability with the upgrade of its Foods factory in General Trias, Cavite, now powered by a mix of renewable energy sources. In 2024, the company signed a 15-year solar Power Purchase Agreement (PPA), marking a shift from its primary reliance on geothermal energy to a diversified energy portfolio that includes solar power.

The newly installed solar photovoltaic system, with a capacity of 1,211 kilowatts, is expected to produce 1,847 megawatt-hours peak annually. This clean energy will supply power to the factory's key operations, including the Savoury and Dressings factories, along with the utilities building. The use of Tier 1 solar panels ensures high-quality and durable infrastructure capable of consistent energy output over the contract's duration.

This initiative supports Unilever's global goal of achieving net zero operational emissions by 2030, using 2015 as the baseline. The energy savings generated from this transition will be reinvested into further improving operational efficiencies at the Cavite plant, which manufactures household brands like Knorr and Lady's Choice.
