First Gen activates new solar plant

This solar initiative follows an agreement made by the two companies in October of last year. Construction was handled by Pi Energy Inc., a sister company of First Gen.

The partnership builds on an existing relationship. Since 2020, First Gen has been providing HCG with geothermal energy from the Bacon Manito plant in Bicol. A new three year power supply agreement for this geothermal energy was also confirmed this month.

Carlo Vega, First Gen's Chief Customer Engagement Officer, stated, "We are committed to supporting the HCG's sustainability journey."

Eugene Lin, President of Hocheng Philippines, noted the dual benefits of the partnership. He said it allows the company to manufacture with a smaller carbon footprint while saving on power costs. These savings can then be redirected to developing more environmentally friendly products.

HCG, originally established in Taiwan in 1931, is a major manufacturer of sanitaryware and bathroom solutions. In related market activity, First Gen shares ended slightly higher last Friday. (Source: The Manila Times)
