Veterans Day Post- A shoutout to all Texas Wesleyan veterans and a personal message to my grandfather.

This was an unfortunate tweet, but it was a tribute to a Fort Worth legend. Dana Bellenger was a volunteer assistant at TCU and helped many golfers from the Texas Wesleyan community. He was a true role model to me during my college golf career.

Terrible news. I worked with Dana my last two competitive years and he worked wonders for my game. He had an incredible perspective on life as well. Tight draw King. Rest easy, Dana.

We are deeply saddened today by the loss of Volunteer Assistant Coach Dana Bellenger. Dana had a profound impact on TCU student-athletes and the Fort Worth golf community for over 30 years. RIP Dana, you will be missed.

The Texas Wesleyan Rams have upped their apparel game. In this tweet, I called for better play to come first. Go Rams!

#MCO2318 If only dripped out football helmets translated to wins. Unfortunately, the Rams won't be able to show these off again until 2021.

We all know how awesome our football helmets are. Why not tell the world?? #TXWES #GoRams twitter.com/RamSports/stat...

Johnson's career has been plagued with injuries. Once again in 2020, injury strikes David Johnson again. What makes things worse is the Texans front office decided to sign Johnson for $11.1 million dollars this year and next year. Kramer represents the way I feel towards the terrible signing.

Devastating reminder that Carlos Hyde is making $2.7 million this year and David Johnson is making $11.1 million.

In honor of the last week's NBA draft, I took a deeper look at how difficult it is for teams to draft well. I first took a local approach, noting how the Rockets struggled with their last first round pick, back in 2015. Finally, I looked back to 2013, where 14 teams missed on one of the greatest players drafted in the last 10 years.

My piece looking back at the Rockets 2015 first round draft pick, the 2013 NBA draft and a few of the 14 organizations that were left regretting not drafting the Greek Freak.

How a deep dive into the Rockets draft history tells an interesting story
Simple question: when was the last time the Houston Rockets struck gold with their first-round pick in the NBA Draft? Heck, the last time ...
