THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March 22, 2023

Dear Mirlande Dina,

Thank you for writing to me. Everyone deserves the peace of mind that comes from having a safe and secure roof over their heads, but millions of Americans cannot keep up with skyrocketing rent or afford to purchase a new home.

My Administration is committed to boosting the supply of single-family and multifamily housing, incentivizing the construction of affordable housing, and relaxing exclusionary zoning policies. We are making home ownership more attainable for many first-time homebuyers by lowering mortgage payments through the Federal Housing Administration. And we are expanding rental assistance programs, increasing funding for affordable and public housing, advancing renter protections, and working to ensure that our most vulnerable citizens—including the elderly, homeless, and disabled—have access to quality housing.

We have also set a bold goal of reducing homelessness by 25 percent by 2025 and provided a roadmap for State and local governments to address homelessness in their communities. Finally, we are rooting out systemic discrimination from our housing market and breaking down unjust barriers that prevent too many Americans from buying a home and enjoying the full benefits of homeownership.

But we can't do this alone. We need Congress to increase federal investment in building more homes, and we need State and local governments to strengthen renters' rights and cut the red tape that makes it difficult to build housing and drives up costs for renters and homeowners.

There is a lot of work to be done, but I am confident that we can live up to our Nation's promise of safe and affordable housing for everyone.

Sincerely,
