The First Nations Eye Health Alliance unveils new logo and artwork: Pathways to Healing for our Communities

The First Nations Eye Health Alliance are pleased to unveil our new logo and artwork: Pathways to Healing for our communities.

Designed by contemporary Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander artist Dennis Golding (Kamilaroi/Gamilaraay) the artwork speaks of contemporary and traditional pathways that support healing and wellbeing in our communities. The artwork and logo acknowledges and celebrates the diversity of First Nation people in Australia and how we connect with to one another through these pathways as one people.

FNEHA is a self determined Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander corporation that aims to prevent vision loss and blindness in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities nationally. We aim to work together utilising traditional and contemporary knowledges and pathways to strengthen health outcomes for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities so that they are healthy and flourishing.
