STATE POLITICS / Could offer different views

Women are reluctant to seek office

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE — From county boards to state legislatures to Congress, women are still notably missing from Carolina politics.

They win as often as men — often they run. But they run less often. The result, many say, is unrepresentative democracy, with less attention to certain issues and nastiness in the political dialogue that would be defused if more women held office.

"It's a numbers game. A lot of women are afraid to take that risk and run," said Rep. Sue Myrick, R-S.C. "I think you would see a difference in the demeanor of the way things are conducted. You'd see more of an atmosphere of working together instead of working against one another."

Elaine Marshall, Secretary of State

None of the four U.S. senators in North Carolina and South Carolina is female, and two of the states' 18 U.S. House seats are filled by women. Nine of 96 state senators in the two states are women. And about 130 of 900 county commissioners and county council members are women.

North Carolina has six female state senators. That's only two more than were there 20 years ago. The 23 female state representatives compare with 19 who were there 20 years ago.

"Women just don't offer themselves for public service," said Elaine Marshall, who in November was elected secretary of state and thus became the first woman elected to North Carolina's Council of State. "I've talked to a lot of talented women, and the thought of running does not appeal to them."

Experts and female leaders say the muddling so typical in campaigns and governing turns off women even more than men.

"If I were not involved in the political realm right now, and I was deciding for the first time whether to run, I don't think I would say Lynn Wheeler, a Charlotte City Council member. "Politics gotten a lot more visceral, believe it has scared a lot of field women from wanting to their hat in the ring. Women delight in political battle name-calling and dirt-throwing

But when women are in they affect both the style and stance of political debate, according to studies conducted by The Center for the American Woman and Politics at Rutgers University.

Women have different priorities than men, the studies show. They are more likely to emphasize issues dealing with women's rights, child care, domestic violence, health care and family

Re: Monthly Meeting

There will NOT be a meeting on March 8. Many members are helping with the Precinct elections and the County Convention, and some are attending the Workshop in Raleigh on March 8. The next club meeting will be April 12.

The Brunswick County Republican Convention is March 22. Registration will begin at 1:00PM. We need the help of all our members at the convention, as our Club will be selling Tee shirts with our logo, elephant jewelry, soda, coffee, and donuts. This is a great time to make money for our club, the public is there, it should be an easy sell, but we need help to work the tables and collect money. We all committed ourselves when we formed the club to work together and make it a success. We need you. Please call the Fundraising Chair (Rosalie Watson 842-8436) to let her know you can help, or call me at 842-3770.

Linda Franklin, at the February meeting, made a motion to change the day and time of our monthly meeting. This would be a change to our by-laws and would require a vote from the membership. This motion will be acted upon at the April meeting. Article IX, Amendment of By-Laws state: The By-Laws may be amended by a two-thirds vote of those members present and voting, a quorum being present. If you do not have a copy of the By-Laws let me know and I will see that you get one.

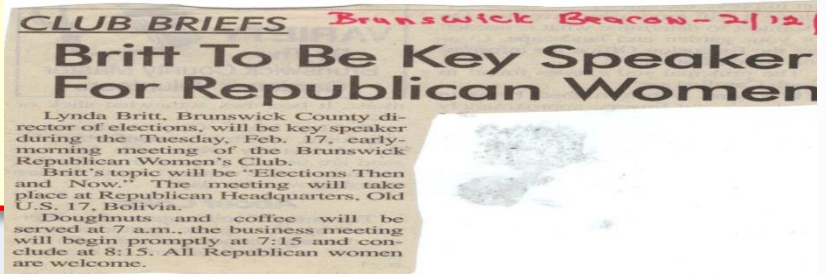

I hope to see you at the convention.

Brunswick Republican Women's Club president Libby Chessare and Shirley Babson, member of the club's legislative committee, attended the North Carolina Federation of Republican Women regional workshop in Raleigh on March 8.

Dear Republican Woman Voter,

WE NEED YOU...

We started the Brunswick Republican Women's Club October 11, 1996 with the goal of rallying women leaders from across Brunswick County to help create a countywide grassroots army that would work to narrow the gender gap in the 2000 election cycle. This is our year! With Women representing 53 percent of the population in the US, and approximately 8,000 voting Republican Women in Brunswick County, who vote in record numbers, we have the power to be the deciding vote. Join us as we strategize on how we can expand the number of Republican Representatives in Brunswick County, N.C. House and Senate the U.S. House and Senate, and take back the White House. It is an exciting year to be a Republican and we need your help to ensure VICTORY 2000.

We meet on the 4th Thursday of each month at 11:00 AM at Republican Headquarters, 971 Old Ocean Highway, Bolivia. For directions please call Phyllis Norwalk at (910) 253-6555 or Shirley Babson at (910) 253-5370

We have an active agenda planned for the rest of the year and hope you will join us. You can also get into the action by becoming a Member of the Brunswick Republican Women's Club. In the Land of Conservative Women

A diverse group of womanactivists, including many young people and small-business owners, are bringing new energy to the Republican Party.

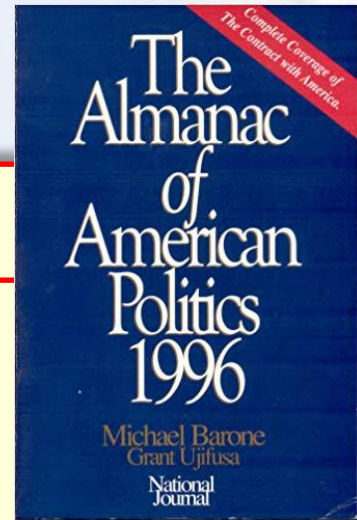

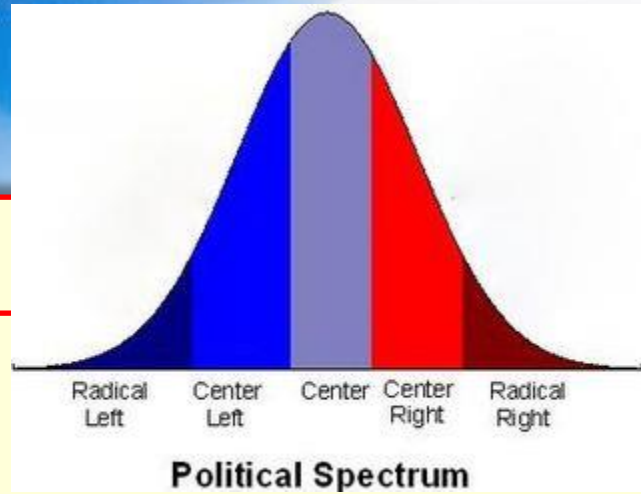

MARION BURKETT, SEPTEMBER 1996 ISSUE

MOVED by a sense of panic in the wake of the Republican takeover of Congress, American feminist leaders gathered in Washington, D.C., last February to lay the groundwork for the counterrevolution against Republican assaults on abortion rights, affirmative action, and funding for a wide range of social programs. "This is a Congress that has harmed women too much," Eleanor Holmes Norton, the Democratic congressional delegate from the District of Columbia, told the crowd at Feminist Expo '96, urging that the Republicans "be targeted for retirement in return." Expo organizers announced that they would launch an ambitious female-voter-registration drive designed to capitalize on the gender gap--the imbalance between American women's tendency to vote for Democrats and the growing preference of American men for Republicans. By exploiting that gap, which was as high as 19 percentage points last spring, they hope to send enough Republicans packing to give control of Congress back to the Democrats. Meanwhile, across town at the offices of the Republican National Committee, the co-chair Evelyn McPhail and her staff were also plotting a mobilization of the women's vote--to a very different end, and in accordance with a very different and less well publicized set of statistics. Whatever the long-term survey numbers indicate for women in general, in the 1994 election most of the white women who voted cast their ballots for the Republican Party. Women under fifty of whatever race are evenly divided in their party identification; women under thirty are actually leaning slightly Republican. Leaving party affiliation and race aside, two women identify themselves as conservative for every one who identifies herself as liberal.

"Familiarize yourself with the information the state sent," said Helen Pannullo, president of Brunswick County Republican Women. "Be informed so you understand the positions of each candidate."

She explained that the organization cannot endorse any candidates until after the May 6 primary and recommended that people avail themselves of early voting. "It makes it easier for you," she said, adding that more voters will be at the polls the day of the primary, which takes more time to complete the voting process.

"I believe in the bumper sticker 'Republican Women are the Life of the Party,'" said Frank Her, chairman of the Brunswick County Republican Party.

Lawler attends Republican Women fall convention in Louisville, Ky.

Kathryn Lawler joined more than 1,275 other Republican women leaders from across the nation, Sept. 19-22 at the National Federation of Republican Women's 37th biennial convention, which focused on leadership training in preparation for the 2014 mid-term elections.

Lawler, a health-care professional specializing in geriatric and dementia care, is completing her third successful year as president of Brunswick County Republican Women's Club. She and her husband, Joe Agovino, are 13-year residents of Brunswick County.

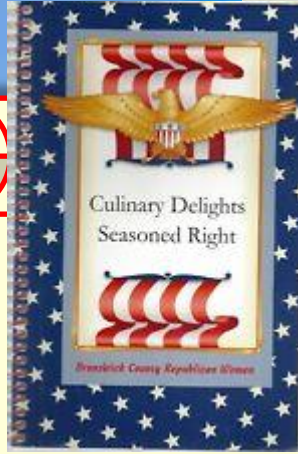

During the four-day event, which was one of the largest national gatherings of Republicans this year, registrants participated in a series of leadership training seminars in the areas of outreach, community campaigns, fundraising, and message development taught by nationally recognized experts. They heard from Republican leaders, elected officials and other guests, including Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.), former Secretary of Labor Elaine Chao, Rep. Renee Ellmers (R-N.C.), Republican National Committee Co-Chairwoman Sharon Day, and noted Brumaker Dinesh D'Souza said it was a well-organized and executed convention, full of great speakers and good ideas to assist Republican Women in the 2014 elections.

'Red, White, and Bundled Baby Shower'

The Brunswick County Republican Women (BCRW) recently hosted Senator Tom Tillis' wife, Susan Tillis, for a Red, White, and Bundled Baby Shower at Ocean Ridge Plantation with members and guests present in support of the Susan M. Tillis Foundation's "Red, White, and Bundled Baby Shower" program that provides baby bundles to enlisted (E6 and below) families with babies born at Fort Bragg.

Tillis noted in the past four years the foundation has delivered over 8,000 bundles with donations from individuals, clubs, knitting circles, quilting groups, and corporations. BCRW members and a local knitting club donated baby blankets, hats, toys and over a hundred gifts of baby supplies, and Girl Scout Troop #3316 presented two baby gifts paid for through Girl Scout cookie sales.

Supporting High School and College Republican Organizations.....

Dear Brunswick Co. Republican Women,
I wish to extend our most sincere thanks for your involvement and generous contribution to the NC Federation of College Republicans. I cannot express how important your group is to the future of our State and country. Our membership is comprised of several thousand young people around NC who realize that the continued growth of government and spending will lead to a loss of opportunity for all. Your shared commitment to restoring America and all you do allow people of our generation to feel a sense of hope for the future.

Your contribution will ensure that Republicans are an active and visible force on every campus and that our colleges and universities are places for debate rather than one-sided indoctrination. We look forward to a great election season working together and may God bless you all.

Sincerely,
Greg Stale
Chairman, North Carolina Federation
