Kensington Food Company Celebrates One-Year Anniversary of Hot Sauce Production Facility, Empowering Dozens of New Food Brands

Philadelphia, PA – 7/8/25 — Kensington Food Company, a rising force in the specialty food manufacturing industry, is proud to announce the one-year anniversary of its hot sauce production facility in Philadelphia's Kensington neighborhood. Over the past 12 months, the company's innovative low-minimum co-packing program has helped launch dozens of food brands across the country.

The facility, which opened in the summer of 2024, has quickly become a go-to destination for aspiring culinary entrepreneurs looking to bring their product visions to life. From handcrafted hot sauces and small-batch BBQ sauces to infused honeys, spice blends, and gourmet condiments, Kensington Food Company has offered a rare combination of affordability, flexibility, and full-service support.

"We recognized a gap in the industry—too many talented creators were being priced out of launching their own products," said Thomas Sheridan, Founder and CEO of Kensington Food Company. "Our mission is to remove the barriers and make food entrepreneurship accessible to anyone with a great recipe and a big dream."

Operating with a unique low-minimum batch approach, the facility has become a springboard for brands that otherwise wouldn't have access to commercial manufacturing. Kensington Food Company handles everything from production and bottling to labeling and quality assurance—offering a turnkey solution that has attracted startups, influencers, chefs, and retailers alike from every corner of the country.

The company also partners with local incubators, markets, and small business development organizations, reinforcing its role as a catalyst for food innovation in the region.

Kensington Food Company plans to expand its co-packing capabilities in the coming year, including additional bottling lines and private-label development services to support the growing demand from retailers and e-commerce brands.
