W. Brent Burgin Lunch and Learn Lecture Series 2024

“How DNA Technology Can Reveal Identity, Ancestry, and Appearance in Forensic Science”

Friday, March 22
2024
Noon

Deborah Rowell, USC Lancaster
Instructor of Criminal Justice

Since its double helix structure was discovered by Watson and Crick in 1953, the potential for the use of DNA has been discussed by scientists, criminologists, genealogists, and many others. Join Professor Rowell as she traces the evolution of the use of DNA in forensic science and examines the future of this powerful tool for identification in criminal justice, anthropology, and beyond.

This program will be held virtually and in person at 119 South Main St. in downtown Lancaster.
