Brooklyn North High Schools Presents: Notes To My Son

The Power of We:
Collectively Inspiring Joy
Among Our Boys

Thursday, June 9th - 1:00pm-3:00pm

This virtual workshop will explore a pedagogy of joy, centering practices and factors that surface joy and connection among our black and brown boys. The school experience is informed by the extent by which students see themselves as critical members of the school community, engage classrooms and curricula, and are supported by the authentic relationships cultivated along their journey of learning.

Join us as we will also hear from teachers and students and will share resources, data, and strategies for educators.

Dr Yolanda Sealey- Ruiz, award winning professor from Teachers College, Columbia University, will lead our Notes To My Son discussion.

Reimagine Schools TED Challenge

Last year a BKNHS district survey of over 300 high school students indicated that they wanted more opportunities for student voice, improved technology, better relationships with teachers, safer schools, engaging classrooms, and more.

What do you want to see different at your school?

Create a ted talk video to share your ideas about your "reimagined school".

One entry per school. Video submissions could include anyone from the school community.

Your Ideas. Your Voice. Be Creative.
Think Big

Deadline date for submissions is Friday, June 10. Videos should be no more than 10 minutes. There will be 7 first place winners to be recognized during the June 21 Principals' Meeting. All video submissions will be recognized, shared, and celebrated.
