“Working hard everyday to support our beautiful Lake and its awesome racing and entertainment. Enjoy it, and come back next year too”

Welcome to Inboard Racing

Lake Hopatcong

You have come to see Power Boat Racing of the inboard division in the American Power Boat Association. In this section we will give you a crash course on how the race will be conducted. So pick a boat you like and will explain what is happening.

While the boat is still on the trailer, the crew is going over it from top to bottom looking for any tiny things that could be wrong – starting the engine – checking the safety equipment, etc... When the class is about to race, the boat is taken to the crane are to be lifted into the water. The first heat will be a qualifier. Depending on the number of entries in a particular class, some may be eliminated. This makes the qualifier most important. Who wants to work on their boat all week, travel up to two days to be eliminated in the qualifier and watch the final race from shore?

The driver (and riding mechanic, Jersey Speed Skiffs only) straps yourself into the boat within a 5-point harness. Once this is done, the drivers patiently wait for the green flag and the five-minute cannon. When the cannon is fired, all the drivers will simultaneously start their countdown watches. The race will officially begin in five minutes. For the next four minutes you will see drivers running the race course to familiarize themselves with the course. Most importantly, they will be making timing runs to see how many seconds it takes from a landmark to the starting line.

At about one minute and thirty seconds before the race, the boats will start jockeying for a lane. You will notice that at one minute a white flag flies and another cannon is fired. Now it's starting to get interesting because in a boat racing, the start is half the race. As the electronic clock ticks away, the last sixty seconds, you will see some driver's position themselves at or near the inside and some hanging behind to make what is known as a hole shot. No matter what technique is used, the object is to cross the starting line when the clock says "0" running flat out. The next challenge will be to get to and through the first turn in undisturbed water. It is impossible to see through a "roster tail", so positioning is very important. While the boats are racing, the rule says that the lead boat must be four lengths ahead before changing lanes. All race courses run a total of five miles. Here at Lake Hopatcong, we run four laps of one and one quarter miles each. Keep your eye out on the turn judge boat (they are anchored inside the orange turn buoys) and the starting line to see what flag is being displayed. There is no electricity on the race course to run colored lights like an auto racing, so we use flags. You will notice after three laps the judges will display a white flag indicating one lap remaining. After the last lap you will see the famed checkered flag signaling the race is complete.

So sit back, enjoy the races and root for a favorite boat!

THE FLAGS: WHAT THEY MEAN

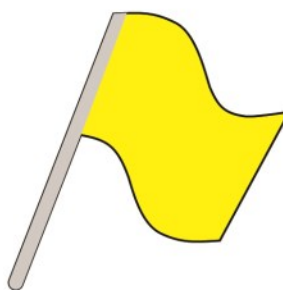

In every form of high speed motorsport racing, flags are used to let the race officials communicate with the competitors on the course. Powerboat racing is no different. Since the race is held on the water, flags are a necessary link in the line of communications, particularly between the referee and the drivers. What do the flags mean in powerboat racing? The following is a list of powerboat racing flags and what they mean.

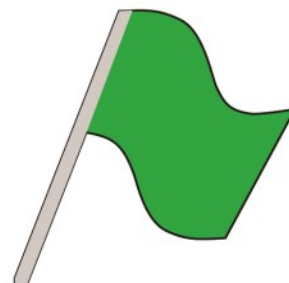

WHITE - Time between one-minute signal and the start. Also displayed when leader of the race has started last lap.

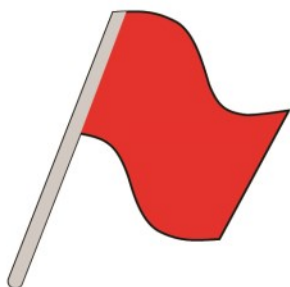

BLACK - Course is closed. Return to pits. Do not leave pits.

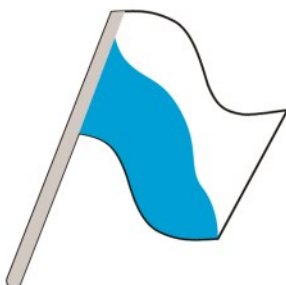

YELLOW - Caution. There are problems on the race course.

GREEN - Time between five-minute and one-minute signals. Also during race except last lap.

RED - Competition is stopped. Slow down, be alert and watch for other signals.

BLUE & WHITE - Used to warn contestants of obstructions on the race course.

CHECKERED - Finish
