PIZZA

This is a story of 3 friends, lost in the mad metropole of London, who went on a voyage of discovery and enlightenment.

And so the journey began. Bags in tow, they travelled 6000 miles on ground and over sea to the hallowed land of Tokyo. For days they trekked, often to the point of collapse. Tears were shed, mouths were dry and bodies were hurt, but the lure of the East was too strong for them to give up.

They arrived, dropped their possessions, and looked up wide-mouthed. Speechless they stood, gazing at the flashing neon lights and dinging arcades. As their eyes slowly wandered from one side to the other, they noticed the beautiful bold tradition mixed with modern pop culture.

Over the coming days they roamed from one district to another, until they attended the great sumo competition at Ryōgoku Kokugikan. Their eyes locked with the great fighter, Ariga-Dough, who squinted back in distrust. The fight concluded with another flawless victory for Ariga-Dough, and he immediately approached the travelling trio. The room was quickly cleared and there the trio stood, motionless and fearing what was to come. To their surprise, cushions were laid down and they were instructed to sit with Ariga-Dough.

How the fable now goes, is uncertain. Some say they were challenged to a mandatory wrestle and their remains were never seen again. Others say the sumo wanted to take one of the 3 friends to marry his little sister, and from that point they all went their separate ways. However, a rare few tell the story of how they sat and were brought a piping hot "Tokyopolitan" pizza with the most mouth-watering yuzu sake they had ever sipped, and were so mesmerised by the irresistible flavours that they partnered with Ariga-Dough to take the food around the world for others to experience.
