IMAGES IN THE READINGS

The Christian writings of the first century give only the beginnings of what became the developed doctrine of the Trinity of Father, Son, and Spirit. For Paul, how can the crucifixion bring God's glory? We have access to God through our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross and through the Spirit "poured" into our hearts at baptism. For John, how can we be assured of God's truth? Through the Son, the Father will send to the faithful the Spirit of truth.

The poem in Proverbs relies on the ancient Near Eastern literary image of Woman Wisdom. Some ancient religions, such as that in Egypt, assigned to a goddess the wisdom of the universe. Like the figure of Justice that we are familiar with, she knows truth and weighs it in her balance. Wisdom, in Hebrew hokmah, is a feminine noun and thus was easy to personify as a mighty woman. Scholars disagree to what extent this imagery was merely a literary convention for early Judaism, or whether instead it points to popular belief in a goddess as Yahweh's consort. For Christians speaking Greek, the poem in John 1 exemplifies the replacement of Wisdom with the Word, logos being a masculine noun. Christ is our Woman Wisdom, who participated in God's creation of the world: see for example stanza 2 in "O Come, O Come, Emmanuel" (ELW 257).
