THE WRESTLING PARENT

Parents in wrestling are courageous...it's true,
They feel all the pain that their son must go through,
At home, when he diets, they wish it would stop,
Yet know he must do it to stay at the top.

Excuses for losing they will never endure,
"Don't blame the Ref, son, because of the score,
The Coach, he will show you the best way to move,
Keep working in practice if you want to improve."

At dual meets, you'll see them whispering a prayer,
As their boy must compete with no one else there,
Whatever the outcome ...Mom cheers with deep pride,
While Dad...you will notice...stands right by his side.

They'll drive to a tournament many miles away,
To witness a son who's prepared for this day,
Their boy, he was trained, with all of his might,
Having hopes of becoming a champion tonight.

But should he fail short, at his corner you'll find,
A Mother and Father...supportive and kind.
They teach that through wrestling he'll learn about life,
Yes, living is filled with both triumph and strife.

Now if you are searching for people who care,
Just look by a mat, they'll always be there.
Such love for the sport is truly inherent,
That's why we salute THE WRESTLING PARENT!!

Wrestling Molds The Man

The Spirit of competition and the desire for physical adventure is a normal heritage of youth. Every growing American boy takes pride in his physical prowess, and it is rare to find any young man who is not anxious to do everything in his power to acquire the skill and development of his inherent physical attributes to the greatest possible degree.

Wrestling is unexcelled as a means of developing a rugged vigorous physique. In addition to muscular and organic strength, wrestling will develop coordination, poise, self-reliance, tenacity, aggressiveness, and the ability to think and plan under severe physical stress. Sportmanship, one of the most desirable of all human traits, finds an excellent medium for development in wrestling because competitive situations are such that the poor sportman can not survive the test.

Wrestling is individual sport at its best. The wrestler is given an opportunity for self-expression which may be denied to him in most team games. He need not submerge his individual personality and merely become a part of a machine which is directed by someone else. Once a wrestler enters a contest, the final outcome is his own responsibility. The coach can not send in remedial advice at a crucial moment and no substitute will appear when a wrestler's powers begin to wane. He can not take "time out" to discuss his difficulties; his success depends upon his own intelligence, determination, and physical powers. It is difficult to conceive a better method of preparing for real life, whose situations will frequently call for self-reliance, initiative, and the ability to make quick and appropriate decisions when in a condition of acute mental and physical discomfort.

Wrestling is unique in one important respect. Its organization into weight classifications provides an outlet for the athletic ambitions of boys of all sizes and weights. The competitive matches permit each individual to compete against an opponent of corresponding size, which means that a proficient performer weighing 95 pounds can enjoy it just as much, can profit just as much, and can be just as valuable to his team as is the heavyweight- an opportunity denied to him in most of our team sports.*
