Our work around meetings and meeting culture development has shown that meetings are a crucial form of company interactions: meetings can boost or drain the creativity, the motivation, the momentum in the whole company, depending on what happens before, at and after these meetings. How meetings are called, prepared, how focused, purposeful, success-oriented, enjoyable they are, how you follow-up meetings matters. Every organisation has meetings: meetings are a logical and pragmatic intervention point for changing the interactions, the focus, the communication culture, the productivity and atmosphere of the whole organisation.

In our 2-day workshop we offer participants to work around their meeting skills in several dimensions:

1. work on their own meeting "know-how" both as meeting facilitators and participants,
2. learn about international best practices about how to conduct excellent meetings and
3. learn about how to change the meeting culture in a whole organisation through an exciting, innovative case study in a financial institution in Hungary
4. work around their first steps to start a change in their own organisation.

For whom?

This highly interactive workshop is intended for:

- Managers and entrepreneurs who are interested in improving their meeting culture, personal and corporate
- Coaches and consultants who would like to find out how to use creative and simple SolutionFocus tools in meeting culture development.

We will look into questions like:

- What are the 12 points of excellent meetings?
- How to create a better meeting culture in two months in a far too busy company with no time at all?
- How to engage people in a mass movement to change their meeting culture?

We trust you will leave with new ideas from international case studies and best practices, AND clear personal goals, resources and small steps about how you can improve the meetings/meeting culture in your own company.
