COHIBA

Cuban Cohibas are known to use some of the finest cigar tobacco available in Cuba. The tobacco for Cohiba is selected from the finest Vegas Finas de Primera (first-class tobacco fields) in da San Luis & San Juan y Martinez zones of the Vuelta Abajo region of Pinar del Río Province. The tobacco used to fill the cigars is unique among Cuban marques because it undergoes a third fermentation process in barrels, which is reputed to give it a smoother flavor than other cigars. Originally all Cohibas were made at the El Laguito factory, a converted mansion located on the outskirts of Havana. Later, production of some Cohiba vitolas was expanded to other factories. The flavor of these cigars tends towards medium to full-bodied.

PARTAGAS

The Spaniard Don Jaime Partagas Ravelo had worked in the Cuban tobacco business for years before establishing his own factory, Real Fabricas de Tabaco Partagas in 1845, on 60 Industria Street in Havana, one of the largest of its time. The name, which translates as "Partagas Royal Tobacco Factory," was supposedly chosen because of Don Jaime's status as cigar supplier to various European and Asian nobility. Don Jaime owned many of the best plantations in the Vuelta Abajo tobacco-growing region of Cuba and being able to choose from among the finest tobaccos on the island made the brand incredibly successful.

SXM PRIVATE LABEL

It's big. It is bold. It is certainly a powerful smoke, but it isn't just strong for the sake of being strong. There's a purpose to its strength, and plenty of interesting flavor to justify the high-octane tobacco inside.

It starts with a Nicaraguan Estelli wrapper, two Nicaraguan binders (Corojo and Criollo) and filler from 3 different fields in Nicaragua. If high volumes of heavy smoke are what you want, this cigar delivers, with satisfying notes of chocolate and gingersnap driven by an underlying red pepper spice and plenty of nutty character. It burns slow and cool, and while the blend doesn't show much restraint, The Sxm Private label is unforgettable beauty to its brashness. A must try blend.
