Midwife, Paramedic,
& Podcast Host

Jessica Arno, The Combat Midwife, has trained over 50,000 United States Army Combat medics, in addition to Army flight medics, Special Forces medical teams, and tens of thousands of Midwives and Emergency Medical Service (EMS) professionals.

She's a Midwife, Paramedic, and EMS educator who has a passion for training individuals, families, communities and local governments in self-reliant obstetrics, gynecology, and pediatric emergencies.

Jessica's instruction and training expertise regarding obstetrics & gynecology emergencies and how to navigate the out-of-hospital birth transfer has been published in EMS World Magazine. She's delivered babies in a plethora of Out-Of-Hospital environments including a tent, in an Afghan refugee camp.

Jessica's approach is fast-paced, but nurturing. Her training allows a wide range of individuals to become self-reliant in delivering babies and caring for our most vulnerable patients.

CLIENT FEEDBACK

I credit her performance to my own personal success. I have completed my service with U.S. Army but, continue to serve the public as a Flight Paramedic. I often referred back to Jessicas instruction.
