BIOGRAPHY

Dr. Camille F. Bolton, PT, DPT

Physical Therapist – First Step Physical Therapy

Dr. Camille F. Bolton is a proud Atlanta native with a lifelong passion for helping others regain function and improve quality of life through personalized, compassionate care. She brings a warm, welcoming presence to her practice, fostering an environment where patients feel both supported and empowered to reach their goals.

Dr. Bolton began her academic journey at Creekside High School in Fairburn, GA, where she stood out as a talented first violinist, an award-winning history student, and a dedicated science scholar. She went on to earn her Bachelor's degree in Sport Management from Georgia Southern University. Following this, she was accepted into Georgia State University's Sports Administration graduate program, where she served as a graduate assistant in the university's athletic department.

Driven by a desire to make a direct impact on individuals' health and mobility, Dr. Bolton pursued her Doctor of Physical Therapy at the University of St. Augustine for Health Sciences. She earned her DPT in December 2019 as a scholarship recipient and top-performing student. Her experience in this rigorous program instilled in her the importance of perseverance, clinical excellence, and continued growth.

At First Step Physical Therapy, Dr. Bolton is known for her ability to connect with patients on a personal level while delivering high-quality, evidence-based care. She strives to ensure each patient feels comfortable, motivated, and confident throughout their recovery journey.
