15 Steps for Sales Playbook Success

1. Perform research to create ‘insights’ on why buyers should think and act differently than status quo – why should they change?
2. Conduct VOC research with high value accounts to learn their buying process and understand your perceived differentiation
3. Refine your value proposition and work with top sales reps to document messages that work to acquire high value accounts
4. Identify your most profitable accounts and create your ideal customer profile (ICP)
5. Define buyer personas for all on the buying team, including their roles, motivations, concerns, and key issues
6. Develop a customer journey map with key touchpoints across channels, needs/wants, expectations and desired outcomes
7. Define qualified lead/account scoring criteria, determine when leads are passed to Sales, or passed back to Marketing
8. Define and align the buying/sales process, including core content, key messages, duration and influencers
9. Audit your content and align it to the buying/sales process to identify gaps, and develop new content for prospects and sales reps
10. Build ‘plays’ for how to move each opportunity to the next stage in the buying/sales process, including updating your CRM system
11. Outline expectations for sales rep activity metrics, follow-up times, etc. and include any SLAs between Sales & Marketing
12. Communicate marketing campaigns, nurture programs, events, etc. to sales reps
13. Integrate playbook and content assets into your CRM system with a sales enablement platform
14. Roll out to sales reps, monitor adoption and correlate to sales results
15. Update regularly with new ‘best practices’ discovered over time

Why Do Our Prospects Need to Change?

Key Insights

Enter your key insights, based on primary research with customers, that challenge prospects to think differently about their current situation. These may be stats that demonstrate that companies who implement your type of solution are more likely to grow revenue, increase profitability, etc.

Without having any key insights to challenge the status quo, why should your prospects care to change? Inaction is often your top competitor.
