

No T1Ds should ever run out of insulin!

If you have less than 1 week supply, here is what to do:

Lilly

- Call the Lilly Diabetes Solutions at 1-833-808-1234 between 9AM-7PM EST, M-F. You will have a confidential conversation with a medical representative who can offer you options for urgent supply needs.

Novo Nordisk

- Click here: <https://www.novocare.com/insulin/immediate-supply.html> to download a Novo Nordisk Immediate Supply card. It supplies you with up to 3 vials, 2 packs of You will be asked to fill out a form with your first and last name. You will need to check the boxes agreeing to the terms. Once filled out, you will be able to email, print, or download the card.
- Provide this information to the pharmacy (in person or by phone) so they can add this card to their payment system before you pick up your RX.

If you have questions about the Novo Nordisk Savings Card Program, you can call 1-844-Novo4Me (1-844-668-6463) from 8AM-11PM M-S EST.

Sanofi

If you have an expired insulin RX and are headed to the pharmacy, you have options:

- You can call your healthcare provider and have them send a new insulin prescription to the pharmacy.
- If your healthcare provider will not call in a new insulin prescription, you can call your pharmacy and ask to speak with the pharmacist. In some states, pharmacists may be able to emergency refill a previously expired insulin prescription.
- If neither of the above options are available, and you cannot afford to see a healthcare provider, there are low-cost/free clinics across the United States that have healthcare professionals who can prescribe insulin. You can find a list of the closest health clinics that may be able to help by visiting these links: <https://findahealthcenter.hrsa.gov/>, <https://www.nafcclinics.org/find-clinic>
- One additional option is to use over the counter (OTC) insulin, which is human insulin available without a prescription. The two types are short and fast-acting: both cost approximately $25 per vial. These insulins are available in all 50 states at Walmart (formerly under the ReliOn brand, formerly NPH and R).
- These insulins may not act as quickly or last as long as the insulin you usually take. That's why it's important for you to talk to a pharmacist or provider before deciding to use them.
