9	Again, we have this. We offer Edmentum curriculum and SAW pick ups and Chromebook drop offs. This is what we can control. What we can't control is a student schedule who now has to work full time to support their family, or a family who can no longer pay for internet. So actually, I suppose we can offer night school and free internet.	8/5/2020 3:59 PM

19	I think we need a staff member dedicated to gathering resources, identify students who could benefit from the resources, and then reach out to students (dropping in during teacher's office hours or student check in times) to introduce helpful resources to students. 25	Exceptional needs students do not do well with distance learning. Unfortunately, with COVID-19 flaring up again, that is how we have to deliver instruction. It is a slippery slope. Since students can't come into the buildings, we need to work with them virtually, however, for some, signing on virtually sometimes feels like it's too much work, so they don't sign in. How do you change that mindset?	7/29/2020 9:40 AM

15	Funding to increase services to low income, English learners, homeless, and foster youth should be geared towards providing access to internet and food. Many students are unable to complete assignments due to their lack of access to internet. I think computer education is a component that is lacking in our population so also providing short computer literacy courses will help to make students more resourceful. I believe that foster youth and homeless students have been deeply impacted by distance learning as they are not able to come into the centers. It is important to provide these children with the opportunity to engage in extracurricular activity to better socialize them and for them to establish relationships to build a positive community of support around them during these lonely and hard times.	7/31/2020 11:44 AM

12	Have a meeting once a month with all their peers so that they still feel like they're part of a school atmosphere	8/5/2020 11:18 AM
13	Utilizing staff throughout the charter to do outreach (i.e.phone calls) to parents and students with weekly or bi-weekly check-ins regarding mental health, needs, interests, etc. would be helpful. Although teachers do this regularly with students it is challenging to be fully responsible for addressing all of the students' needs while also helping them academically. By having other staff members reach out would show we care while also strengthening the relationship between our school and the student/family.	8/5/2020 9:44 AM
14	New curriculum look	7/31/2020 11:57 AM
15	I think that providing students access to technology and to internet hot spots will make students want to come to our check ins and will give us some leverage with student engagement and provide incentive for students to meet goals for unit requirements. Kids love the internet and if we can provide it for them, we can also reduce the amount of time they spend using it in case of unsatisfactory progress.	7/31/2020 11:44 AM

29	Inviting student voice through fun activities such as community circles or engaging students with student centered activities. It is also important to use Multimodal learning strategies during distance learning.	7/20/2020 3:20 PM
30	Some students are dragged along by parents which results in disengagement from Day 1. Perhaps we can improve upon helping each student see why there are here and the benefits of engaging with us. That initial buy in may make future interventions unnecessary.	7/20/2020 2:58 PM
