August 2021 - 3S Art Newsletter

There is so much beauty in nature and for centuries artist have tried to capture that beauty. They paint landscapes and still life paintings in an attempt to even come close to the beauty that nature provides.

This issue of the newsletter will focus on gems as an inspiration from nature. One in particular, the Opal, is a truly beautiful gem.

Opals

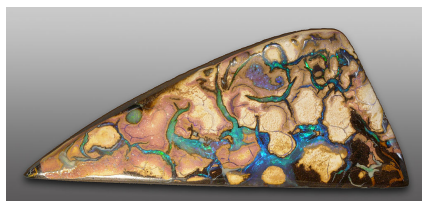

Opals and the story of one of the towns where they are mined is very interesting. Welcome to Coober Pedy, a place in Australia where people live underground to survive and to mine this gem. Welcome to Coober Pedy.

"Around 1915, a teenage boy whose father was gold prospecting discovered opal in Coober Pedy. Although the first opal claim was staked soon after, it took time before opal mining took off in the area. After WWI, returning soldiers, accustomed to living in trenches, drifted to the opal fields to seek their fortune. After WWII, a wave of Europeans left their war-torn countries to take up opal mining in Australia. As a result, sixty percent of the miners living at Coober Pedy today have Southern or Eastern European ancestry. By the 1970s, the opal rush was in full swing.

The name "Coober Pedy" comes from the Aboriginal Australian kupa piti, meaning "boys' waterhole." However, another type of hole has become quite a hazard. Over the years, miners have dug over 250,000 shafts, making Coober Pedy a dangerous place for tourists to walk around carelessly."

Plein Air Art

Acadia National Park - Bar Harbor, Maine plein air art class. This was a great experience. Plein air painting is about leaving the four walls of your house or room behind and experiencing painting and drawing in the landscape.
