I recently had the good fortune to travel to Barcelona, Spain. It's a beautiful city with many amazing attractions but I was particularly impressed by Park Guell, created by renowned Catalan architect, designer and artist, Antoni Gaudi.

Park Guell is an architectural masterpiece, with tree-shaped columns and undulating forms that merge in perfect harmony. The colors of the broken tile mosaics that cover the surfaces of each of the elements is an unprecedented technique by Gaudí that makes the astonishing shapes come to life.

Built from 1900 to 1914, the park was officially opened to the public in 1926. In 1984, UNESCO declared the park a World Heritage Site.
