Two Excellent Options for Medicare Supplement Coverage

In 2026, you have a choice of a $283 out of pocket risk on a PLAN G, or a $2,950 out of pocket risk on a HIGH DEDUCTIBLE PLAN G. Both Plans cover the same underlying expenses as a Plan F, except there are higher out of pocket risks of $283 or $2,950.

PLAN G

With PLAN G, the policyholder pays the Part B Deductible (in 2026 this is $283). After that, the policyholder pays no more out of pocket for covered Medicare Part A and Part B expenses. The Plan G pays the Part A deductible, Part B coinsurance (usually 20%), and other gaps in Medicare Part A and Part B.

OR

PLAN HDG
(High Deductible G)

With HIGH DEDUCTIBLE PLAN G, the policyholder pays the first $2,950 of Medicare Part A and Part B expenses that are NOT paid by Medicare. Usually, the policyholder pays the Part B deductible, 20% of Part B costs and if hospitalized, the Part A deductible. (The Part B deductible of $283 in 2026 IS included in the $2,950 total.)

PLEASE NOTE:

* Monthly premiums vary based on zip code, age and in some states, gender.
- Foreign Travel Emergency is covered by both Plan G and HDG, but those costs are totally separate from the Medicare Part A and Part B costs. Medicare does NOT cover care received outside of the United States, but the Foreign Travel Emergency Benefit does cover some of those costs.
- Both the Part B deductible and the High Deductible G deductible typically change each calendar year. These deductibles are adjusted yearly by the Federal Government.
