There is simple ignorance, which is the source of lighter offenses,
and double ignorance,
which is accompanied by a conceit of wisdom;
and he who is under the influence of the latter fancies that he knows all about matters of which he knows nothing.

If history's greatest thinkers, writers, and political leaders were around today, what would they say about Donald Trump? Many, even though living centuries ago, have offered prescient observations that ring powerfully true today, as when Shakespeare wrote in King Henry V (1599): "I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart."

Deconstructing Trump is a compilation of 1,000 quotations from prior centuries that speak to the ascendancy of an unconventional, controversial, and even buffoonish political novice to the presidency of the United States of America. While none of the featured quotations mention the 45th president by name, they have a collective Trump-illuminating quality that is often startling, and sometimes even edifying. For embarrassed, weary, angry, or discouraged citizens in need of a little Trump Therapy, a dose of Deconstructing Trump may be just what the doctor ordered.

Deconstructing Trump is a collection of a thousand points of light. These prescient historical quotations shine brightly on the hollowness of the man they so clearly bring to mind. When the history of The Trump Era is written, Grothe's name will be among those who chose to speak up.

— Anu Garg, founder of Wordsmith.org and author of A Word A Day

Deconstructing Trump is a brilliant idea consummately executed!

— Rosalie Maggio, bestselling author of How to Say It

This is a wonderful book—erudite, passionate, and, most of all, heartening.

— Laurence Shames, bestselling author of the Key West Capers series of books

All those who cherish the things that truly make America great will be gratified and inspired by the fruits of Grothe's brilliant labors.

— Fred Shapiro, Editor of The Yale Book of Quotations
