Dharma Decoded

How Millionaires Make Decisions

Ratan Tata famously said:

“I don’t believe in taking right decisions. I take decisions and then make them right.”

Most people make decisions based on what they feel is Right.

- Emotions – How they feel in the moment
- Urgency – the fear of scarcity
- Ego – The default mode network overriding human brain
- Optics – the perception of what others think

Dharma however makes decisions based on FLOW of Evolution

- Dharma is not about making right or wrong decisions
- Dharma is about making the decision that FLOWS with the Natural Evolution of Creation. This is why Krishna asked Arjuna to go against battleground rules because the Kauravas did everything against dharma, and you cannot win against people who constantly break the rules to win, be that even for a short time of success.

All successful people make high-level decisions based on what protects the long-term order of their life, not what feels good in the moment.

Motivational Speaker Zig Ziglar understood this concept on FLOW of Creation, he said

“If you can give people what they NEED you have can everything you WANT”

Reaction creates chaos. Alignment creates power.

Decoded Insight

Dharma is not simply about being good. It is about making choices that create order, stability, and long-term alignment. This is why disciplined thinkers often outperform emotional decision-makers.

Use This Today

Before making an important decision, ask: Will this create short-term pleasure or long-term order? The answer will often reveal whether you are acting from impulse or from alignment.

Takeaway

The people who build wealth, influence, and legacy learn to choose order over impulse.

Order first. Emotion second. That is how legacy is built.
