New Law Provides for Early Detection of Alzheimer's Disease

Early Detection Means More Positive Outcomes for Patients and Families

Many of us know someone who is affected by either Alzheimer's, dementia, or another cognitive disorder.

Alzheimer's is the most common form of dementia. It causes problems with memory, thinking, and behavior. It's an irreversible progressive brain disease that affects an estimated 6.5 million Americans aged 65 and older, as well as 280,000 Pennsylvanians.

But this year, those who are concerned about this devastating disease have reason for hope.

Recently, Governor Wolf signed the Early Detection and Diagnosis of Alzheimer's or a Related

About the New Law

The Pennsylvania Dept. of Health created educational resources and a toolkit to help primary care workers better detect, diagnose, treat, and refer people for additional care.

The department will also try to raise public awareness about cognitive decline, Alzheimer's disease and related dementias.

Visit the PA Department of Health's new Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders resources:

- General Public:
www.health.pa.gov/topics/disease/Pages/Alzheimers.aspx
- Healthcare Providers:
www.health.pa.gov/topics/disease/Pages/Alzheimers-Provider.aspx

Disorder Act after unanimous approval in the Pennsylvania House and Senate.

The new law's goal is to help improve the complicated and often difficult process to receive an accurate diagnosis by empowering families and providing a toolkit to physicians for early detection, diagnosis, and care planning.

Early detection is important because an early diagnosis can improve the quality of care and life as well as reduce the financial impact of the disease.

Or, put another way:

Early detection = more positive outcomes for patients and families.

Early diagnosis allows individuals living with the disease and their caregivers to:

- Better manage medications
- Build a care team
- Manage comorbidities
- Receive counseling and other support services
- Develop a financial plan
- Create advance directives
- Enroll in clinical trials, and
- Address driving and safety concerns.

The better dementia is managed, fewer complications from other chronic conditions arise, and unnecessary hospitalizations are avoided.

The problem is that most people don't know they have Alzheimer's or a related dementia.

According to the Alzheimer's Association:

- Only about half of people with Alzheimer's or other dementia have been diagnosed —and many are unaware of their diagnosis.
- Among those seniors who have been diagnosed, only 33% are even aware that they have the disease. And even when considering caregivers, less than half (45%) of those diagnosed or their caregivers are aware of the diagnosis. This percentage is even greater in minority communities.
- In Pennsylvania, one in ten people aged 45 and over report they are experiencing confusion or memory loss that is happening more often or is getting worse. Yet nearly half of them have not talked to a health care professional about it.

The new law intends to address this problem. The bill's prime sponsor was State Representative Carrie Lewis DelRosso, R-Allegheny/Westmorland. DelRosso said she was inspired to do something about cognitive disorders after the death of one of her friend's mother, who died a few years after being diagnosed with Lewy body dementia.

Following passage of the law, the Pennsylvania Department of Health collaborated with the Alzheimer's Association, Department of Aging, clinicians, and other stakeholders across the state to build a toolkit for early detection, diagnosis, and care planning to support primary care physicians and advanced practice providers in the community. The Department of Health has made educational resources available on its website for health care providers and the general public (see box on P. 4 for details).

Importantly, the new law requires the Department of Health to update these resources annually. The Alzheimer's Association has been encouraging the Department of Health to convene stakeholder groups to listen and learn more about this topic throughout the year, according to Jennifer Ebersole, Director of State Government Affairs for the Alzheimer's Association, Greater Pennsylvania Chapter.

The Department of Health will also try to raise public awareness about cognitive decline, Alzheimer's disease, and related dementias.

This legislation helps strengthen the capabilities of our primary care work force – the physicians, nurse practitioners, and physician assistants who are at the front line of medical care. By providing education, sharing tools, and linking to resources, this new law will increase the ability to detect and assist those impacted by this disease.

Submitted by Presbyterian SeniorCare Network, an aging services provider that has been at the forefront of dementia care innovation for more than 30 years. Discussing Your Medicare Coverage With Your Broker

When an individual is coming onto the Original Medicare Plan, how does he or she decide between staying on Original Medicare, the standard government issued A and B Plans, with a Supplemental Plan or choosing an Advantage Plan, plans from private insurers that work within HMO and PPO networks? This article aims to help everyone through this important and often confusing decision, which is highlighted in the diagram on page 10 as Step 1: "Decide how you want to get your coverage."

The left column details Original Medicare Plans. An individual on an Original Medicare Plan does not have to worry about the different types of networks, such as HMO or PPO. The network is any provider in the United States that accepts Medicare, making it very inclusive. Since Original Medicare Parts A and B have deductibles and coinsurance, an individual sticking to these plans should add a Medicare Supplement Plan to help cover most or all the out of pocket costs. Supplemental Plan premiums are usually higher than premiums for most Advantage Plans. However, Advantage Plans come with greater out-of-pocket cost exposure, which may actually exceed the Supplemental Plan's premium. Navigating this balance is key to choosing between Original Medicare Plans with a Supplement and Advantage Plans. That being said, other factors must also be considered. For example, if an individual may consider traveling far away from their residence for care, Original Medicare with a Supplemental Plan may be preferred due to its inclusive, national network relative to Advantage Plans, which work within HMO and PPO networks on a regional basis.

What are my Medicare coverage choices?

Due to these various factors and considerations for choosing between Original Medicare with a Supplement and an Advantage Plan, it is always advisable to talk to a broker that specializes in Medicare. Find a broker that is licensed with multiple Advantage Plans, supplements, and drug (Part D) plans. Brokers are paid on commission from healthcare carriers, not by individual Medicare recipients, so a broker's services are often free to individuals. If an individual has already chosen an Advantage Plan, they may be able to switch back to Original Medicare with a Supplemental Plan, and vice versa, with the help of a broker. A broker will be able to discuss this important decision in greater detail, looking at an individual's personal needs to decide if Original Medicare with a Supplemental Plan or an Advantage Plan is preferred. Medicare can be a confusing, difficult marketplace to navigate, and brokers can help, often at no cost to the Medicare recipient.

What a Certified Aging-In-Place Specialist Can Do For You

The NAHB Remodelers of the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) in collaboration with the NAHB Research Center, NAHB 50+ Housing Council, and AARP developed the Certified Aging-In-Place Specialist (CAPS) education program to help serve consumers who require home modifications to age in place. While most CAPS professionals are remodelers, an increasing number are general contractors, designers, architects and health care consultants.

How should you modify your home to make it more comfortable?

To age-in-place, you will probably need to modify your house as you mature to increase access and maneuverability. These modifications range from the installation of bath and shower grab bars and adjustment of countertop heights to the creation of multifunctional first floor master suites and the installation of private elevators.

What is the CAPS designation?

A Certified Aging-in-Place Specialist (CAPS) has been trained in:

- The unique needs of the older adult population

- Aging-in-place home modifications
- Common remodeling projects
- Solutions to common barriers

How should you choose a remodeler?

- Figure out how much money you wish to spend on the home modification project.
- Seek referrals from friends, family, neighbors, co-workers and others who have had similar work done.

- Contact trade associations such as your area's local Home

Builders Association or Remodelers Council.

- Check with your local or state office of consumer protection and the local Better Business Bureau.
- Verify the remodeler has the appropriate license(s) in your state.
- Look for professional designations such as CAPS.
- Ask your professional remodeler for a written estimate of the work to be done based on a set of plans and specifications.
- Select a professional remodeler with plenty of experience with your type of project. Remember, lowest price does not ensure a successful remodeling project.

Why It Is Important to get “Real” Rehabilitation

I am frequently asked, “Is there a difference in the types of rehabilitation that you receive?” The answer is a resounding, “Yes.”

Think of it as a glass ceiling. A glass ceiling may occur because of your gender, race or physical disabilities. It means that there is a “ceiling” that limits your opportunities and career choices. If you have a disability such as a stroke and you don’t get the proper type of rehabilitation, you will reach a “glass ceiling.” Not one of real glass, but of opportunity. You are not going to advance beyond a certain point or achieve your goals, and you will prematurely reach a plateau.

An example I like to use is that I have three grandchildren with three college funds. If I decide to take away my youngest teenage grandson’s fund and give it to his sisters, I have limited his opportunities. I have created a glass ceiling for him. (Wait—please don’t tell him quite yet!)

If we don’t give people the right type of rehabilitation, we also set a glass ceiling. They will experience some spontaneous recovery, but they will reach an early plateau. We need to provide the right amount of dose (the correct number of hours of therapy), performing functional tasks, in an inpatient rehabilitation facility. This way they will reach the goals that we have for them. Otherwise, you will create a rehabilitation glass ceiling.

Think about walking on a path in the woods and you come to a fork in the path. The further you go down one path, the farther away you get from where the other path would have taken you. The inpatient rehabilitation hospital path will lead you much closer to an optimal recovery. If you take the other path, it will lead your farther away from your goal of recovery.

Where you go for rehabilitation is “your path” and one of the most important decisions you will make.

FAQs About Senior LIFE

You may have questions about how Senior LIFE works and what it entails. Read on for a look at some frequently asked Senior LIFE FAQs and their answers.

What is the LIFE program?

“LIFE” stands for “Living Independence for the Elderly,” which is a federal and state funded Medicare/Medicaid program that provides a comprehensive array of health and support services to qualified older adults so that they can continue to live independently in their home and community for as long as possible.

The LIFE program is a part of a national Program of All-inclusive Care for the Elderly (PACE).

What services does Senior LIFE provide?

Members have customized care plans to meet their individual needs. Upon enrolling in Senior LIFE, members meet with an interdisciplinary team of physicians, nurses, social workers, rehabilitation therapists, and others. This healthcare team will work with you and your family to determine a plan of care that is individualized to meet your specific needs. The services you receive will be based on this care plan that you will approve. If your medical or social needs change, the care plan changes to meet those needs.

Can I keep my current doctor under Senior LIFE?

Like other health care plans, Senior LIFE has a network of doctors, specialist and health care services. Senior LIFE's healthcare network includes doctors, specialists, health services and hospitals located in the local community. The doctors you see must be one of our contracted or center-based physicians which could include one of your current specialists.

Senior LIFE primary care physician and nurse practitioners are trained and experienced in working with seniors and treating the unique medical issues that they face such as diabetes, hypertension and Alzheimer's disease.

What happens if I am a member and I have an emergency at home?

If the situation is not life-threatening, members call their on-call nurse. However, if the situation is more serious, call 911, or get to the emergency room. Our team will be involved to ensure care plans are followed during any hospital days.

How much does Senior LIFE cost?

What you pay depends on your eligibility. If you are eligible for Medicaid, there are no monthly premiums, deductibles, or copayments for any drug, service or care approved by your Senior LIFE team. If you are eligible for Medicare but not eligible for Medicaid, a monthly premium is charged. You

Is Senior LIFE the same thing as a nursing home?

Senior LIFE is NOT the same thing as nursing home. The goal of the Senior LIFE program is to keep seniors living safely at home and in the community for as long as possible. Many of our members live in their own homes, senior housing complexes, apartments, or with family.

How does Senior LIFE help older adults stay at home for as long as possible?

Senior LIFE is able to help seniors remain in the comfort of their home by combining services available at our center with home care services and a 24-hour, 7-day-a-week on-call nurse. This helps ensure that members get the care they need, while caregivers get peace of mind.

Aging in Place with Home Care Services

Advocating a positive vision of aging, elderhood advocates encourage us to turn a blind eye to the foolish notions so many of our peers hold that portray the aging process as a frightening, panic-inducing, gradual fade away into a kind of subhuman non-existence.

Rather, we are encouraged to think independently and realize aging for what it really is: a natural part of life that should be readily accepted, attended to, and integrated with the many other elements that ultimately construct and define our lives.

After all, age, disease, and disability, as well as long-term care do not define our existence as people; they are but just one aspect of life.

Through contemplative and affirmative thought, eschewing pessimism and choosing optimism and focusing on the positive, you are perfectly poised toward implementing a personal care plan for your life that is inclusive of the major pillars necessary to create a happy, healthy, sustainable, and functioning existence.

Among the major pillars of creating a sustainable healthy life ensuring that we are to have our health conditions, ailments, and chronic diseases attended to via high-quality levels of assistive long-term care and that the various tasks we may require assistance in are tended to by professionals who treat us with the utmost care, compassion, and respect.

Whether it is via personal care, primary care, nursing home care, in-home care or non-medical home care, a patient-centered medical home care, part of a retirement community, or any other form of elderly care we need to make sure that we are cared for properly and appropriately, and our health and well-being is respected and upheld.

Home care assistance services fulfill most all our health, emotional, physical, and activities of daily living (ADL) needs in a professional manner that enables you to concentrate on being a lively, confident senior dynamo who is full of zest and zeal for life and is excited for the new experiences to be found in each passing day.

The home health care assistance agency that you employ should provide you with the unwavering high-quality care that is on par with the care that you would receive in a skilled nursing facility.

Any of the tasks, chores, ADLs, bathing, grooming, medical and financial management issues you may have trouble attending to on your own should be readily assisted by a home care aide experienced in providing this kind of basic assistive care in an effective, empathetic, and kind manner.

To do:

- Before choosing a home care agency to help you with your in-home needs, ensure that the health care aides the agency will be sending to you are trained, licensed, credentialed, and have the depth and breadth of experience required to meet your needs.
- If possible set up an appointment to interview the agency as well as the professional that they intend to match you with.

- Come prepared with your most pressing concerns and a variety of questions that cover every aspect of those concerns.
- If possible, bring family and loved ones with you along to the interview to gain their perspective on the quality of the business.

Home care is a highly utilized service by senior citizens across the country for a variety of factors. In addition to enabling them to live individual lives that are self-reliant and dignified while allowing them to live within the comforts of their home, home health care services are popularly opted for due to their comparatively affordable pricing.

With many home care agencies staffing highly trained and educated professionals who can attend to a multitude of senior-related health concerns, there is often a corresponding range of prices offered.

Your home health care agency should offer a range of specialized services that seniors can opt from to meet their individual needs.

- If you require IV-drips, specialized medical equipment, shots for diabetes, or even weekly blood tests or other specific medical situations, can your home health care agency readily provide this equipment and ensure that it is brought to every appointment by a professional knowledgeable in its use?
- Consider specific needs you have such as transportation, companionship, appointment management and more.
- Ask your prospective home care agency if they are able to guarantee high-quality work in all the areas of most pressing concern to you.

Home health care assistance services can become an important and integral part of your life as you stride through your golden years and plan the next steps for your newest journey, passion, interest, or goal. With so many agencies available on the market today, it can be difficult to make the right choice. However, with a keen eye on aspects such as professionalism, empathy, reputation, and more, you can take

When I came home from a Care Facility I needed Home Care. I have never been disappointed with the care I received or the professionalism of the staff. They always arrive when scheduled and display a caring persona. Every worker "cares" about me. None of them leave without asking if there is anything I need. When calling the office its been a pleasure to speak to a Human Being instead of an answering machine. My questions are always answered and proper direction given. Service Satisfaction Among Hearing Aid Users

Fifty million Americans have hearing loss. Fifty million. There are more people who have hearing loss, than those who suffer from diabetes, Alzheimer's, autism and osteoporosis combined. While hearing loss is not life threatening, it can take away the quality of your life through isolation, separation and sadness.

A Johns Hopkins medical study also revealed that a mild 25dB hearing loss can increase falling by three times and also plays a role in accelerated brain tissue loss and the development of dementia. Other comorbidities include higher incidence of heart disease, diabetes, arthritis and depression.

With hearing loss becoming a more common diagnosis, why are we so reluctant to seek treatment? Hearing loss comes with a social stigma that contributes to the belief that people who wear hearing aids are old or less intelligent. Other factors are- perceived lack of benefit, denial of hearing loss and avoiding "the label" are reasons why we are so dismissive of the idea.

The average age of hearing aid users is 70. This is not because of aging, but because most people with a loss wait up to 15 years before buying their first hearing aids!

The truth of the matter is hearing loss can affect anyone regardless of age, gender, ethnicity, or social status and not a sign of weakness or lack of abilities.

The onset can be due to various factors including genetics, noise exposure and certain medical conditions.

Research suggests hearing loss may be more prevalent than previously reported. With the increase in noise pollution so prevalent today, many new cases of hearing loss are found even in teens and young adults. Included in the growing number of Americans discovering they have hearing loss are veterans, construction workers, steel mill employees, policemen, firemen, heavy machine operators, factory workers, musicians, and dentists.

How do we stress the importance of treating hearing loss? What barriers need to be broken down surrounding our prejudice behind one of the most life altering treatments?

It begins with understanding better hearing health truly does lead to better overall health.

Heel Pain

Don't Delay Treatment

Any kind of pain or injury that affects the foot affects the whole body. Our feet are what connect us to the ground and provide a solid foundation for the rest of the body. When you experience heel pain or injury it's always important to see your doctor if the pain persists.

We asked Dr. Alissa Parker, a podiatrist for Washington Health System Foot and Ankle Specialists, when you should contact a doctor about heel pain.

"Heel pain resulting from injury, persistent heel pain, or heel pain that is worse with activity should be examined by a professional," she says.

If the pain is the result of a minor injury, there are a few things you can try at home to see if the pain will go away on its own.

"Patients can try rest, ice, supportive shoe gear and over the counter anti-inflammatory medications if they are able to do so based on their primary care doctor's recommendations," says Dr. Parker.

There are several conditions that are associated with heel pain. The most common cause is plantar fasciitis. Plantar fasciitis is the inflammation of the ligament that attaches to the bottom of the heel bone and supports the arch of the foot. Another common cause is insertional Achilles tendinitis. This causes pain where the Achilles tendon attaches to the back of the heel bone.

Though these are the most common causes of heel pain, Dr. Parker also sees patients with rarer conditions

"Less common conditions include stress fractures of the heel bone, bone cysts, bone tumors and infections or skin issues," says Dr. Parker.

Dr. Parker stresses the importance of being proactive about heel pain and not taking a “wait and see” approach.

“A delay in treatment can, in some cases, cause scarring and thickening of soft tissue structures, making conservative treatments less likely to be effective,” says Dr. Parker. “There are also less common causes of heel pain that should not be missed. Proper x-rays of the foot may be necessary.”

Some people are more at risk for heel pain than others. Highly active people, individuals who work on their feet and individuals who work on hard floors generally have more heel impact daily. People who are overweight are more likely to experience heel pain because of the additional weight that their feet need to support.

If you fall into one of these risk categories, or just want to be proactive about preventing heel injury, there are some ways to minimize risk. “Daily calf stretching up to three times per day is a great way to try and prevent heel pain due to plantar fasciitis or Achilles tendonitis,” says Dr. Parker. She also urges those at risk of injury to always wear supportive shoes and take advantage of special inserts and other supportive shoe gear. She also advises against walking barefoot, even at home, for extra protection.

Dr. Alissa Parker is a foot and ankle specialist and surgeon at Washington Health Systems. If you are suffering from heel pain or other foot and ankle issues, talk with your primary care physician about a referral to Washington Health Systems Foot & Ankle Specialists or schedule an appointment at one of our convenient locations by calling (724) 222-5635 or visit whs.org/footandankle.
