

Blooming Dreams - Tulip Studies

Tulips arrive briefly in the spring, then slip away. In Blooming Dreams, a series by Dizzywalker, the tulip is not a botanical subject but a vessel for feeling. Each work holds a single bloom in a different state: upright, leaning, braced against wind, opening, withdrawing. Small shifts in posture become a language of emotion.

The atmosphere is deliberately quiet. It gives the red tulip space to speak without interruption, held within a soft, shifting light. These prints are made to be lived with: a calm presence at a distance, and a deeper intensity up close, returning to you differently as the day changes.

Each print is a limited edition, individually signed, and accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity. Created for collectors who value restraint, tonal depth, and emotional precision.

Print 2 | Gathering Light

The full set

Print 1 | Windline

A tulip bent by movement, holding its shape at the edge of giving in. A study of grace under pressure.

Print 2 | Gathering Light

A red form held in a soft clearing, as if the room itself is breathing around it. Calm, luminous presence.

Print 3 | Quiet Defiance

An upward lift against a heavy sky. The petals open with intention, not optimism. Steady and assured.

Print 4 | After the Storm

A bloom that has passed through weather and remains. The air is unsettled, the gesture is resolved.

Print 5 | Night Bloom

The darkest atmosphere of the set. The flower reads like a small flame, intimate and concentrated.

Installation View

A visual reference for scale and the overall rhythm of the series.

Collector note

Printed on Hahnemühle German Etching paper, chosen for its velvety matte surface and quiet tonal depth. The paper holds shadow and softness with the same clarity, allowing the reds to sit in the room with presence rather than noise. This set is created for collectors drawn to atmosphere, restraint, and emotional precision.

Following the strong response to the Dandelion series, now viewable on the Dizaura website, this tulip set is offered privately and reserved for selected collectors.
