Samundra Man Singh Shrestha

Born in 1980, Shrestha is a trained Paubha artist. He started his journey into the world of art at the tender age of 14. Shrestha's work skillfully combines his inspiration and mastery of the traditional Newar style of painting with conceptual contemporaneity—with binaries and juxtaposition of past and present, modern and traditional, and the aesthetic with pure conception. His innovative works push the boundaries of the sacred and secular, by challenging the very categories of contemporary and traditional art. His art works are deeply rooted in the sacred knowledge of iconography of deities, He has received significant national and international awards, and his work is in major collections of India, UK, US, Europe, and East Asia.

Rajan Sangachhen

The passion for art developed in him when he learned to draw an elephant with his elder brother. It was the time when he was in grade one. His brother & his friends joined the art class at that period and there was an inside feeling that if he could have gone with them, but he couldn't. He never demands anything from his parents. Rather Rajan continued my academic study. After a while, he started learning drawing from his brother and his brother's friends. One of his brother's friends was a fantastic artist of wood curving. Those were the people who inspired him in the art for the first time. Whenever he got a chance, he drew from the science book as a reference book where he can find varieties of drawings of plants & animals. And they were the reference book that he used to advance his art. Later he drew from various types of comic books. That helps him a lot with understanding the drawing techniques.
