CSL Licensing change

Sarah Wilkinson, Chief of Elevators and Deputy Commissioner overseeing Building, Engineering, and all trades briefed the BBRS that CSL licenses will no longer be printed and issued. Potential start date is February 1, 2023. The license holder is still responsible to have proof of their license and a government issued photo ID available.

The license holder and building officials have access to the online portal for CSL registration to verify the CSL status. The License holder should print their status page for proof of valid license and be able to present a driver's license or other valid government photo ID.

The Building Officials on the Board expressed reservation with this change, however it did not seem that the governing department was going to change the plan. Further Ms. Wilkinson explain the amount of time spent issue and reissue lost licenses was problematic, also indicating this was in line with other states and agencies.
