

It Takes a Family: Using Children’s Literature to Advance Social Awareness

Course Description: With a renewed push to increase academic performance in the classroom, genuine conversations regarding social justice issues often get pushed to the side for assessments and data collection. While many district mission statements elude to the idea that the purpose of education is to develop a socially-aware citizenry, the space for that learning and development to occur is minimal, at best. For these conversations to occur, teachers need to actively select texts that engage students in critical thinking while also utilizing strategies to create civil discourse surrounding topics which are often controversial.

Using the work of Paulo Freire, this course will examine the importance of integrating social justice topics in elementary school. Participants will be modeled best practices for integrating social justice children’s books into their curriculum and will learn about privilege, banking education, and critical consciousness.

Clock Hours / Continuing Education Units: 5

Learning Objectives:

- Describe the challenges that affect a teacher’s ability to promote social justice in the classroom
- Identify how privilege can dictate how curricular decisions are made and critical conversations are facilitated in the classroom
- Evaluate best practices for integrating social justice children’s books into the classroom.

Course Requirements: To receive full credit for the course, participants must complete ALL assignments. Failure to complete all assignments will result in a non-passing grade
