

Biography: Jenna Sims - SDCC

Jenna Sims was born and raised in Camarillo, California. Her passion for Aviation was sparked by a loving conversation with her father about her interest in becoming an Air Force fighter pilot. With the support and motivation of her father, Jenna pursued this new dream with all her heart, and denied her insecurities with the challenges that women face in aviation. Jenna views her birth as a miracle from God and she exhibits her faith outwardly knowing she has a special place in the heart of her Heavenly Father.

Jenna is a Cum Laude graduate of San Diego Christian College where she received her Bachelors of Science Degree in Aviation Technology as well as her Certified Flight Instructor Rating. Jenna's excellence in aviation resulted in her hiring as an adjunct teacher for the Aviation Department at SDCC. She will also be a coach for the SDCC's successful Flight Team.

Jenna was a member of the SDCC competition Flight team, competing in the national college flying championships 3 years in a row. In her Junior and Senior years Jenna won Top Female Pilot honors in the NIFA Region II Competition as a member of the SDCC Flight Team. Through the years Jenna has been devoted to building relationships between competing Flight Teams in an effort to promote unity between the Collegiate Aviation competitors. Jenna's passion for Aviation and for Christ have steered her ultimate goal of becoming a commercial professional pilot with a special passion for aerobatic flight.
