JAARS

I am the oldest of five boys and was raised in a Christian family. In Jr. High, I could sense that God was leading me into full time service of some sort. As I continued through high school, it seemed like God was leading me into missionary aviation.

I thought I was going to be the missionary pilot and so applied and was accepted into the Moody Bible Institute aviation program. I earned my A&P license and went into flight school. I struggled through flight school and eventually switched into avionics.

I took a short mission trip to Papua New Guinea in 2003 after graduation and God used this trip to confirm his calling for me to serve as an avionics technician with JAARS. After this trip I worked at AeroGenesis working on Saab 340's for the airlines and Duncan Aviation in Battle Creek, MI.

I have served in Papua New Guinea full time since 2008 and have really enjoyed my time there. I will be returning there in early January.
