

RECOVERY IS HERE

Spread the word. Show up. Help someone take the first step toward recovery.

A statewide call to action this September

This September, during National Recovery Month, recovery organizations and Alabama's community colleges are joining together to launch Recovery is Here. This powerful statewide initiative will mobilize action, awareness, and support around substance use disorder.

Coming to a campus near you

Recovery Is Here 2026: The Truth About Recovery – an educational event to address stigma around substance use treatment and recovery by replacing misinformation with facts, lived experience, and meaningful dialogue.

Last year, Recovery Is Here events brought students, communities, and providers together across Alabama to increase understanding and highlight that recovery is possible. This year, Recovery Is Here will focus on one central question: What does recovery actually look like?

Details

 Monday, September 28, 10 am
 Lawson State Community College
Academic Success Center Auditorium
3060 Wilson Rd, SW, Birmingham, AL 34221

This 90-minute event includes:

- Treatment Options: Voices from the Field—brief presentations from treatment professionals representing different approaches and levels of care
- Recovery Pathways—short videos highlighting multiple pathways to recovery, including medication-supported recovery, mutual support communities, and faith-based recovery
- Interactive panel discussion and audience Q&A
- A brief post-event booth and conversation period where attendees can connect directly with speakers and learn more.

Join the movement.
Find hope. Be the change.