5 THINGS TO CONSIDER

Whether a new fit out or upgrading, there are a few things to consider when looking for security doors and window screens that you may not even be aware of. Let's make that a little easier with 5 questions you should have the answers to prior to making a decision:

- Has the product been tested in accordance to the Australian Standards? And have they passed? YES, that's correct.. Security doors and window screens must pass a number of tests to be classified as security compliant.
- Will the product also be installed in accordance to the Australian Standards? You can have the strongest product on the market but without the correct installation they may be easily compromised. Would you know how many tamper proof screw's are required to secure your security window screen or within what distance they must be of each other?
- What materials are used to manufacture the product? How are these materials bonded? Each 'brand or product' is manufactured using different materials and bonded in different ways. If in coastal area's ensure to ask about possible corrosion.
- What type of locks will be used? To adhere to the Australian Standards and again be considered security compliant security doors must be fitted with '3 point locking systems'.
- How long is the warranty on your product? Is it a replacement warranty or will you repair the product if issues arise? Some 'brands or products' require cleaning and maintenance schedules to be followed in order to maintain the warranty. Also check the warranty on accessories such as locks and rollers.
