Adams County Republican Committee (ACRC) Statement on Electoral Integrity and Misinformation

The Adams County Republican Committee (ACRC) is committed to addressing and correcting misinformation regarding its activities and practices. The ACRC maintains a strict policy of neutrality and does not endorse candidates prior to a Primary Election. The Committee firmly believes that voters should have the sole authority to determine which candidates advance to the general election, free from any party endorsements. This principle reflects the ACRC's unwavering dedication to fostering a fair, transparent, and impartial electoral process.

During the primary election period, individual ACRC members are free to support any Republican candidate of their choosing without obligation, restriction, or consequence. The Committee ensures that no member's fundamental right to participate in the democratic process is suppressed or limited in any way.

To uphold fairness, the ACRC provided equal opportunities to all countywide candidates. These opportunities included access to candidate training, petition-signing events, town halls, and other resources. Additionally, each candidate's campaign literature and yard signs were displayed equitably at the ACRC Headquarters. The ACRC's website and social media platforms provided equal visibility for all candidates, ensuring that voters had access to unbiased information without undue influence.

The ACRC remains steadfast in its mission to promote a democratic process that empowers voters and upholds the integrity of elections in Adams County.
